DRAMATIC MOMENT—Shaking her hand, Bernard M. Baruch, Administration adviser on manpower, thanks Mrs. Margaret Horvath, mother of four sons in armed service, for her dramatic plea against passage of the Wheeler bill given at a hearing before Senate and House Military Committees yesterday. "I feel that men should go when mere babies are going," she said. She has a son, 18, about to be called.

'Back the Attack'

General Marshall to Address Army Show Audience Today

By Bert Kemmerer
Post Staff Writer

Tonight America's No. 1 soldier—Gen. George C. Marshall, Chief of Staff of the United States Army—in a rare public appearance will speak before the great audience at the Army's own "Back the Attack" show.

The bluff chieftain of the hard-hitting United States Marines—Lieut. Gen. Thomas Holcomb—last night told the Nation and the impressive audience at the arena that "The past is our gauge of the future."

General Holcomb said the great massed material — guns, tanks, planes, equipment and supplies of the Army was "a sight to fill every American with pride."

"When we undertook the first American land offensive of the war, on Guadalcanal, we knew these weapons would not fail us. The enemy used every obstacle his diabolically clever mind could devise to stop our advance.

"But our planes, landing craft, tanks, guns, rifles, trucks, amphibian tractors, bull-dozers, jeeps and scores of other pieces of equipment was too much . . . It was as much a victory for the toil and sacrifice of the fighting men and women at home, as for the toil and sacrifice of the fighting men in the front lines. . . ."

The Third War Loan points the way, General Holcomb explained.

He concluded: ". . . And we know that bonds are making—and will continue to make—that flow possible. The American people will 'Back the Attack' until the forces of tryranny are brought to complete and final justice."

Russians Take Town on Way to Smolensk After 48-Hour Battle

By James M. Long
Associated Press Staff Writer

London (Thursday), Sept. 23.—The Red Army stormed down a railroad toward Kiev to capture the village of Lyeski, 18 miles from Russia's fourth largest city, Moscow announced today, as the towers of Kiev, high on the banks of the Dnieper River, loomed in Soviet gunsights.

Far to the north, in one of the bitterest battles of the summer, Soviet forces captured Demidov, 42 miles northwest of Smolensk and only 21 miles from the border of White Russia.

The Germans launched 12 counterattacks in their desperate attempt to hold Demidov, said the Moscow midnight communique, recorded by the Soviet monitor here, but they could not hold out against the Soviet attack, and one Nazi division was routed.

8000 Germans Fall

More than 8000 Germans fell in the 48-hour fight, 300 prisoners were taken and large quantities of war material were seized, it was declared.

In another area of this sector one German battalion was completely wiped out and another regiment routed.

Other Soviet spearheads were last reported 18 miles from Smolensk, once Adolf Hitler's headquarters in the East.

In general advances of up to 12 and 15 miles in some sectors, the Russians won back 864 hamlets and villages, moved in to within 5 miles of the middle Dnieper River at one point, and peeled German protective layers from Dnepropetrovsk, Zaporzhe and Gomel.

Far to the south, the Nazis backed up to the Kerch Strait in their last foothold in the Caucasus, already doomed by other Soviet gains. The communique announced the capture of Anapa, one of the last few evacuation ports to the Crimea.

Bitter Kuban Battle

In the Kuban fighting 1200 Germans were killed and 200 captured.

Soviet planes wiped out two battalions of Germans and smashed 120 trucks and 15 German field guns.

The communique told of the capture of Berezan, 39 miles due east of Kiev. Fifty miles southeast of Kiev Red columns won the town of Pereyaslav, 5 miles from the Dnieper, and 85 miles to the south captured Zolotonosha, 8 miles from the river.

Oster, 37 miles north of Kiev on the marshy shores of the Desna, was taken in a push that brought the Russians 9 to 12 miles nearer

Italian Port Aflame as Clark Strikes Enemy's Hill Positions

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, Sept. 22.—The American Fifth Army in Italy drove slowly tonight into the last mountain barrier before blazing Naples as United States "commando" troops joined the French in mopping up the island of Corsica and the British won Potenza and control of all south Italy below an arc from Salerno to Bari.

The Germans were evacuating Corsica after leaving 1000 dead on the battlefield and several hundred prisoners. A French communique said enemy survivors of their original 12,000 men were being compressed into the northeast corner of the French island in retreat from the Levie and Bonifacio-Porto-Vecchio region in south Corsica.

The German escape route and its terminal ports of Bastia on Corsica and Leghorn on Italy were bombed heavily by American Liberators recently transferred to this theater from Britain.

"An American Commando unit (probably Rangers) is fighting by the side of patriots and regular French troops," Gen. Henri Giraud's command said. "The Germans left more than 1000 dead on the battlefield. Several hundreds of prisoners fell into our hands."

Sardinia, the big Italian island 7 miles south of Corsica, apparently was under control of American and friendly Italian troops. (German broadcasts repeated that Sardinia had been evacuated.)

American and British troops of the Fifth Army captured Campagna, San Cipriano and Montecorvino-Rovella—all strategic points on the widening Salerno front 20 airline miles below Naples. The Allied communique said "the Fifth Army continues to regroup and move forward."

Campagna is 20 miles inland from Salerno and 6 miles northeast of captured Eboli. San Cipriano is 8 miles east-northeast of Salerno and 35 miles short of Na-

Allied Headquarters, Southwest Pacific (Thursday), Sept. 23.—Two new blows have been smashed at the Japanese in the accelerated Pacific offensive—a seaborne landing in force, under fleet and air protection, of Gen. Douglas MacArthur's troops north fo Finschhafen, New Guinea, and the complete destruction of the enemy garrison on Arundel Island in the Solomons.

The Finschhafen stroke, delivered Wednesday only six days after the fall of Lae, 60 miles to the southwest, was aimed at capture of a base which would give the Allies complete control of the Huon Gulf, a potential springboard against nearby New Britain.

The destruction of the garrison at Arundel, which is adjacent to American-held New Georgia, puts forces of Admiral William F. Halsey within artillery range of the large Japanese garrison at Vila across the Blackett Strait on Kolombangara.

Dawn Assault

The landing above Finschhafen occurred at dawn Wednesday 6 miles north of that base in the vicinity of peacetime mission headquarters and just below the Song River. There were no details on this action except that the landings were opposed by the enemy.

"Our ground forces have destroyed all remaining enemy forces on the north shores and on nearby Saga Karasa Island," the communique reported on the Arundel action.

The Japanese, sensing the peril to Vila, had been moving in enemy reinforcements at night across the narrow strait on barges, but in the mopup six of these barges were sunk by infantry weapons and artillery.

The enemy on Kolombangara then opened up with its artillery, inflicting some American casualties.

120 Japanese Slain

This landing beyond Finschhafen followed quickly the seizure by air-borne Australians of the enemy base of Kaiapit north and west of Both Finschhafen and Lae.

Headquarters today disclosed that a patrol of the troops which captured Kaiaput have killed 120 Japanese.

The Allied air arm struck heavily north of the new operations scene around Madang, making 46 bombing and strafing passes. Nine Japanese planes were downed at Hopoi.

Hopoi is an enemy air strip 30 miles east of Lae, or between there and Finschhafen. From Finschhafen, for which General MacArthur now is bidding, it is only 70 miles across Dampier Strait to New

Yugoslavian Patriots Seize Italian Town

Bitter Fighting For Possession of Sisak Reported

By International News Service

London, Sept. 22.—Yugoslav Patriot headquarters announced today that their guerilla forces have plunged 30 miles into Italy to seize the rail town of Gorizia, 22 miles northwest of Trieste and 75 miles northeast of the big Italian port of Venice.

Also said to have been seized by the Patriots in establishing a bridgehead in northeastern Italy was the nearby town of Slovbystryca (Villa di Nevolo, in Italy.)

Most of Town Taken

In a broadcast direct from their stronghold in the Yugoslav mountains, General Tiro's Patriot forces said bitter fighting now is raging for possession of the town of Sisak, 40 miles southeast of Zagreb on the rail route to the capital at Belgrade. Zagreb is only 100 miles east of Trieste.

"The greater part of the town is firmly in the hands of the liberation army," said the Patriot communique.

Other Patriot forces, meanwhile, occupied three more Adriatic islands—Korcula, Lastovo and Rab—and cut off all of the Peljesac Peninsula south of the principal Dalmatian port of Split.

Capture Airdrome Intact

The latest victories gave the guerillas control of more than half of Yugoslavia, including all of the Dalmatian coast except for a few towns for which bitter fighting now is raging.

Capture of the Italian town of Gorizia, effected by Slovene units, gave the guerillas possession of an

Gen. Marshall May Retain His Title In Global Post

By the Associated Press

Completion at the recent Quebec conference of strategic planning for the global war against the Axis was the primary fact which made possible the proposal that General George C. Marshall take the field command of all Anglo-American forces, a high official said yesterday.

Agreement on essential features of the plan left to the Army general staff in Washington the job of simply keeping in operation the processes already evolved and approved, freeing Marshall for the command of troops, he said.

However, it is possible that Marshall, after becoming global commander of Anglo-American forces, will retain his title of Chief of Staff of the Army, although initially his principal headquarters probably would be in London. In that event, the present deputy chief, Lieut. Gen. Joseph T. McNarney, might take over as acting chief of staff, or a theater commander be brought back to Washington as acting chief.

Ruhland Sends Hospital Data To McCarran

D. C. Commissioners Likewise Submit Gallinger Report

By Anne Hagner
Post Staff Writer.

The swiftly snowballing investigation of Gallinger Hospital moved with continued speed yesterday as Chairman McCarran of the Senate District Committee received a compilation of reports and correspondence on the institution from Dr. George C. Ruhland, District health officer, just 24 hours after his request for information.

Dr. Ruhland explained to reporters that the sheaf of papers was gathered together hastily to meet McCarran's deadline of 36 hours, set Tuesday afternoon, and added that he planned to make a more comprehensive survey in response to a similar inquiry from Senator Holman (Republican) of Oregon on which there was no time limit.

Commissioner Guy Mason also spent most of yesterday at work on Gallinger files to send to the Senate, likewise coming well within the McCarran deadline at noon today. It was learned last night that the Commissioners' report was put into the mail shortly after the close of working hours and will reach the Senate District Committee this morning.

McCarran's request to Dr. Ruhland was for all information and correspondence which he had carried on with other persons concerning Gallinger. Holman's was for the results of personal observations and investigations, and the extent of his supervision of his staff.

The Nevada Senator made a quick perusal of Dr. Ruhland's report, then sent it by messenger to Holman's office, laughingly turning down a reporter's offer to deliver it.

Holman observed the large number of communications contained in the envelope and declined to release any of its contents until after 10 a. m. today.

From Dr. Ruhland, however, it was understood that the report contains complaints from patients at Gallinger, copies of his own replies and other correspondence.

Mother of Four Men In Service Urges Calling of Fathers

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

A mother of four fighting sons crashed Senate hearings on the fathers' draft yesterday to stormily denounce the Wheeler bill and urge Senators to heed their last witness—Bernard M. Baruch.

The tall, white-haired war mobilization adviser had just concluded an afternoon-long appeal to legislators to give Gen. George C. Marshall "what he wants" and give it to him "now."

Through three hours' examination by Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, Baruch had stuck to his story that every available man and woman will be needed on the war and home fronts before Axis "scoundrels" are crushed.

Wheeler had done nearly all of the questioning and most of the talking and one wag called it a "filibuster."

None had noticed Mrs. Margaret Horvath, the elderly, unimpressive little woman seated directly behind Wheeler in a chair assigned spectators. But as the hearing concluded every eye was upon her.

Shattering the senatorial decorum soothingly maintained up to that point by Chairman Robert R. Reynolds, Mrs. Horvath jumped to her feet, shouted for recognition and poured out her story before

Relief Plan For Liberated Lands Revised

State Department Completes Draft; Objections Met

Bowing on the one hand to pressure from the United States Senate, and on the other to requests from smaller members of the United Nations, the State Department will release today a second draft for a United Nations relief and rehabilitation organization.

Release of the first draft June 10, after the Hot Springs food conference, brought a burst of Senatorial criticism of the State Department because some members felt the agreement was in the nature of a treaty, while the Netherlands government presented the protests of smaller powers which felt the Big Four had been given too much authority.

Lehman May Head Group

Authoritative sources disclosed yesterday after an executive session of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee that the agreement definitely would not be considered a treaty to be ratified by a two-thirds vote of the Senate.

Mentioned here last night for the post of director general of the organization is Herbert H. Lehman, head of U. S. foreign relief. State Department sources indicated Lehman's present post had always been considered temporary until the United Nation's organization could be agreed upon by all concerned.

The smaller nations, it was indicated, would be mollified by a provision that the central committee composed of Great Britain, the U. S. S. R., China and the United States, would be answerable to a council composed of delegates from all United Nations.

Another Safeguard

The Senate, which has had a subcommittee of the Foreign Relations Committee working on the question all summer, is expected to be satisfied that Congress will have control over U. S. participation by

Hamilton Fish Criticized In Legion Vote

Misuse of Frank Charge Made In Resolution

By The Associated Press

Omaha, Sept. 22.—The twenty-fifth annual American Legion convention adopted a resolution today charging that Republican Representative Hamilton Fish of New York "with certain other isolationist members of Congress" permitted use of the congressional frank by George Sylvester Viereck and the America First Committee in disseminating propaganda "inimical to the United States."

Naming of Fish in the resolution drew strong objection from Ellidor Libonati, Chicago attorney and Illinois Republican leader, who urged the convention to adopt a resolution not mentioning Fish.

Such a resolution, Libonati said, was passed at the last convention in Kansas City. Libonati's motion to eliminate the name of Fish, whom he described as "a good legionnaire," lost by voice vote. The report of the Americanism Committee, which contained the resolution, was adopted.

The resolution charged that "it has been proved by documentary evidence" that on April 14th of this year a franked envelope of Fish was mailed from San Diego, Calif.,

Nazis' Own Errors Cost Them Big Chance to Invade Britain

Gladwin Hill
Associated Press Staff Writer

London (Thursday), Sept. 23.—The Germans definitely planned the first aerial assault on London three years ago this month to set off the invasion of Britain.

The RAF, which had the major task of breaking up the attack, was outnumbered more than 4 to 1 by the German air force's planes.

Now, as England is marking the third anniversary of the epochal Battle of Britain, it is possible for the first time to divulge some behind-the-scenes facts of the struggle which could only be chronicled broadly at the time.

The Germans were always known to have planned to invade England eventually, but it never previously was disclosed how imminent the invasion was or by what a close margin it was thwarted.

The sources of this information can not be specified, but the data is authentic.

The invasion—for which 2500 barges were massed at ports across the English Channel and in the North Sea during the attack on London—was to have been the climax of a five-week program culminating in mid-September.

The planned preliminary steps were to have been the knocking out of the RAF and then the bombing of London to shatter the will and ability to resist.

If the invasion had been launched in June, 1940, right after the collapse of France, it might have succeeded. Here is how desperate Britain's air situation was:

After Dunkerque, the RAF had only three squadrons that hadn't been in action on the Continent. It was using squadror of Defiants, with the World War I gunner-behind-the-pilot arrangement, and a squadron of obsolete Gladiator biplanes. The fighter command had to borrow pilots from the coastal and bomber commands, and even from the fleet air arm. RAF flying fields were being guarded with 20-mm cannon, awating installation in planes.

The force that battled back 400 German planes on September 15, 1940, and 850 on September 27 amounted to only 29 squadrons—less than 350 planes—some of which fought three times in a day.

The RAF's big assets, besides courage, were a radio-location system, an unsurpassed operational system, and the Germans' sequence of mistakes. Here is how the experts summarized it for the first time today:

The Germans counted on dive-bombing, but the evasive tactics which saved the Stukas in Spain didn't work in Britain. Against attack, their bombers didn't have enough armor. The failure forced the Germans into high-level, daylight, pattern bombing in which they didn't believe and which proved too vulnerable to disrup-

Amazing Advances Reported In Combat Plane Production

By Ben W. Gilbert
Post Staff Writer

War Production Chief Donald M. Nelson's monthly munitions report yeterday revealed amazing advances made by the aircraft industry in producing superior combat planes for the United Nations.

Highlights of the report included:

The average airframe weight of each plane accepted in August was 7800 pounds, as against 5600 a year ago, and 3800 in August 1941. Within a year, the average weight per plane is scheduled to rise to 10,000 pounds, a figure that emphasizes the tremendous size of many of the new aircraft, since thousands of light trainer planes combine to cut down the average weight.

Production of the planes most urgently needed by the armed forces doubled in the past five months, with a total of 7612 produced in August, an increase of 3 per cent in numbers and 7 per cent in weight over July.

Production of types marked as preferred by the armed forces made up one-half of the total monthly weight for August, compared with one-fourth a year ago. This was interpreted as an indication that the program to reduce the number of types of planes has proceeded apace with a number of less satisfactory models going by the board.

During August, production of top-preference models increased 4.5 million pounds, largest monthly increase yet recorded. Production of each of the top preference

6-Point Peace Plan

Hess Took Quit-or-Be-Smashed Ultimatum to Great Britain

By the Associated Press

London, Sept. 22.—Rudolf Hess, Germany's former deputy Fuehrer sitting now in dejected obscurity in Britain as a prisoner of war, brought with him six specific proposals for peace on his weird flight to Scotland on May 10, 1941.

He proclaimed that Hitler wanted "to stop fighting," but was prepared to smash Britain and put her in perpetual bondage unless she took the opportunity of calling off the war.

Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden told the story in Commons today in a government statement after two years of official silence.

The peace proposals formed the central disclosure of the story of the strangest diplomatic mission in history—a one-man mission that descended in a parachute from the skies to a Scottish farm and was met, not by gold braid and striped pants but by a wide-eyed plowman with a pitchfork.

The facts of the case indicated that high German leadership—perhaps even Hitler himself, although Hess disclaimed that he was acting with the Fuehrer's knowledge—by May 10, 1941, had given up hope of defeating the British people.

And at that time Britain had recovered only slightly from her lowest depths of the war.

Then Hess was third man in the most powerful military organization in the world. Now in captivity he sits writing verse and occasionally demands that his orderly first taste his food lest he be poisoned.

Eden's story revealed also for the first time why Hess sought out

Charles P. Taft To Head Relief In East Indies

The State Department yesterday announced appointment of Charles P. Taft as head of all United States rehabilitation work for the East Indies and Malaya.

Taft has been director of community work services of the Federal Security Agency since 1941. He will head an interdepartmental committee composed of representatives of various agencies interested in economic problems in each of the two areas after their liberation.

Taft, a former Cincinnati lawyer, was chairman of the Federal Steel Mediation Board in 1937 and has long been connected with Government and community service.

Hess Took Peace Plans to Britain

the Duke of Hamilton, a young and thoroughly patriotic RAF wing commander, but a man of no political importance in Britain. Hess told the Duke that his friend, Dr. Karl Haushofer, German geopolitical theorist, who is believed to have greatly influenced Hitler's ideas, had told him (Hess) that the Duke was "an Englishman who would understand his point of view."

The Duke of Hamilton since has been commended officially for his loyalty to Britain. Hess made six peace points, which included that Germany should have a free hand in Europe; that former German colonies should return to Germany; that Russia should be included in Asia, but Germany had "certain demands" to make of her which would have to be settled either by negotiation or war; and that Churchill's government should be supplanted for the negotiations.

Text of Statement

Following is the text of the Government's official statement:

Hess flew to Great Britain in an ME-110 from which he landed by parachute in the evening of May 10, 1941, at Eaglesham in Scotland.

He was wearing the uniform of a captain of the German air force. He gave his name as Alfred Horn and stated to the home guard and police that he was on a "special mission" to see the Duke of Hamilton and that he had intended to land at Dungavel, 12 miles distant from the spot where he landed.

The prisoner was taken to Maryhill Barracks and among his possessions were found photographs of himself and of a small boy, also visiting cards of Dr. Karl Haushofer and Dr. Albrecht Haushofer, his son. No other documents of identifications were found on the prisoner.

On Sunday, May 11, at 10 a. m. Wing Commander the Duke of Hamilton arrived at Maryhill Barracks and visited the prisoner with the interrogating officer and military officer on guard.

Reveals Identity

At the prisoners' request the latter two officers withdrew. He then stated to the wing commander that the latter had lunched in his house in Berlin at the time of the Olympic games in 1936 and added, "I am Rudolf Hess."

The wing commander had no recollection of the prisoner and was not aware that he had ever seen or met Rudolf Hess.

The prisoner then proceeded: "I am on a mission of humanity. The Fuehrer does not want to defeat England and wants to stop fighting."

His friend, Haushofer, he stated, had told him that the wing commander was an Englishman who would understand his point of view. He had tried to arrange a meeting in Lisbon. He had three times before tried to fly to Dungavel, the first time being December, 1940, but had been turned back by weather or various other reasons.

He did not want to come during the time of British successes in Libya lest it should appear that it was the weakness of Germany which prompted his flight, but that now Germany had had some success there (Libya) he was glad to come.

Proof of Sincerity

He stressed that his presence showed his sincerity and German willingness for peace.

His main theme was that Hitler was convinced Germany would win sooner or later and that he (the prisoner) wanted to stop unnecessary slaughter.

He asked the wing commander to get together leading members of his party to talk over things with a view to making peace proposals.

He then stated that he could tell him what the Fuehrer's peace terms would be.

The wing commander pointed out that there was now only one party in Great Britain.

The wing commander immediately flew to London and reported this conversation, stating that though he could not be sure he believed the prisoner was in fact Rudolf Hess.

Known to Kirkpatrick

Mr. Kirkpatrick of the foreign office, who had during the period of his official duties in Berlin before the war become acquainted with Hess, was at once flown up to Scotland to identify the prisoner.

He had three interviews on May 13, 14 and 15. At the first of these he confirmed that the prisoner was Rudolf Hess.

During these interviews Hess further elaborated the object of his visit. He stressed the enormous power of Germany in the air and in U-boats which later, he stated, would grow much greater. He affirmed the certainty of England's defeat by blockade, if not very quickly, in the course of two or three years.

He expressed his horror at the prospect of prolongation of the struggle. He had come, he said, without the knowledge of the Fuehrer to convince the responsible persons that since England could not win, the wisest course was to make peace at once.

He gave his word of honor that the Fuehrer had never entertained any designs against the British Empire nor had he ever aspired to world domination. The Fuehrer would sincerely regret the collapse of the British Empire. Hitler had declared to him as recently as May 3 that he had no oppressive demands to make on England.

Solution Proposed

The solution Hess put forward was as follows:

One—That Germany should be given a free hand in Europe.

Two—That England should have a free hand in the British Empire except that former German colonies should return to Germany.

Three—That Russia should be included in Asia but that Germany had certain demands to make of Russia which would have to be satisfied either by negotiation or as result of war. There was, however, no truth in rumors that the Fuehrer contemplated an early attack on Russia. [He attacked the next month.—Editor's note.]

Four—That the British should evacuate Iraq.

Five—The peace agreement would have to contain a provision for reciprocal indemnification of British and German nationals whose property had been expropriated as a result of the war.

Six—The proposal could only be considered on the understanding that it was negotiated by Germany with an English government other than the present British government. Mr. Churchill who had planned the war since 1936, and his colleagues who had lent themselves to his war policy were not persons with whom the Fuehrer would negotiate.

Last Chance

Hess concluded by emphasizing that the Fuehrer really wanted a permanent understanding with Great Britain on a basis which would preserve the British Empire intact. His own flight was intended to give Great Britain a chance of opening conversations without loss of prestige.

If this chance were to be rejected it would be the Fuehrer's duty to destroy Great Britain utterly and to keep the country after war in a state of permanent subjection.

These so-called "terms" were restated by Hess in a signed document dated June 10. The only new point made in this document was a provision that a simultaneous armistice and peace must be concluded with Italy.

It was throughout made clear to Hess that there was no question whatever of any talks or negotiations of any kind taking place with Hitler or his government.

Hess has been dealt with as a prisoner of war since his arrival in this country and will so continue to be treated till the end of the war.

Salerno Story

Nazis Missed 31 Trapped Americans

By John O'Reilly

New York Herald Tribune Correspondent Representing the Combined American Press.

(Distributed by the Associated Press)

With the Fifth Army in Italy, Sept. 19—(Delayed).—American troops advancing today near the bloody triangle between the Sele and Calore Rivers came upon 31 American infantrymen who had been trapped there for a week with Germans all around them.

It developed that these men were part of a unit which had been overrun by German tanks in the push which caused the Americans to withdraw and consolidate their lines during the early part of the battle for the Salerno beachhead. They had to remain hidden continually and were almost without food.

Complete Fatigue

Patrols moving up after dawn this morning saw the men walking wearily out of a woods. Their helmets identified them as Americans but their general appearance was one of complete fatigue.

Their uniforms were covered with dirt and sweat. Hollow eyes peered from behind beards stiff with dust. Their knees bent as they walked and although they still clung to their rifles they carried them as though they weighed a ton.

While resting and eating the canned rations the patrols gave them, they told how they and their comrades had lain hidden in the woods along the river for a week.

They dug holes over which they placed branches and leaves. They were out of ammunition and there was nothing else to do but try to escape detection. The Germans kept moving in and guns and tanks were set up less than 200 yards from their hiding place.

For three days they scarcely moved from their holes without anything to eat. At night they crawled to the river for water. After three foodless days they crossed the river at night. There were even more Germans on that side, but they managed to find an Italian garden with nothing in it but popcorn and onions.

They carried the onions and popcorn back to their holes and that was all they had to eat for a week. Then the American artillery offensive to drive out the Germans began.

Like Section of Hell

The 31 Americans stayed in their holes with shells falling all around them. Then wave after wave of medium bombers came over. The area became like a section of hell.

The bombardment finally ceased and the Germans began pulling out. They left without discovering that they had been almost living with their enemies for a week. This morning there was silence until the sound of American voices was heard, and the 31 crawled out from their holes on weakened legs to join their fellow-soldiers.

This indicates why the British originally were bearish about the American Flying Fortress and Liberator high-altitude, daylight precision bombing, which subsequently proved not to have the same weaknesses.

The rigid five-week invasion schedule, geared to the tides and the weather, forced the Germans to stop bombing the coast just when it was having some effect. They then went after the airfields, and again left them just when they were making some inroads to go after London.

Vital railroad communications to the capital were just beginning to sustain heavy damage when the Germans shifted to scatter-bombing. They hoped in this way to demolish the city, arouse the people against the government and classes against each other, and provoke a demand for reprisal bombing of Berlin, which would divert the RAF.

Actually, scatter-bombing on the scale they employed (before the winter night blitz) would have taken years to destroy a city such as London.

By subjecting all groups of citizens to the same hazards, the Nazis actually brought all classes together solidly behind the government, and the natural clamor for bombing Berlin was wisely ignored by the RAF.

The big day of September 15, 1940 when of an attacking force of 400 German planes 185 were shot down with a loss of only 25 British planes and 11 pilots, was considered especially significant with regard to the United States. Just after that an American military mission returned from England with an optimistic report which was believed to have done much to influence American opinion of Britain's chances.

The day the RAF repelled the Nazis' second big attack with 850 planes, on September 27, the Germans signed a 10-year pact with Italy and Japan, possibly indicating she had abandoned all hope of invading England and was settling down to a long war.

the Ukrainian capital.

Other Soviet forces were dashing for the Dnieper banks in the southern Ukraine, where Novo-Ukrainka, 8 miles northeast of the river town of Zaporozhe, was captured.

German resistance was softer in the fight to reach Gomel, inside White Russia, south of Smolensk. Advances of up to 15 miles took more than 260 populated places including Starodub, 70 miles east of Gomel.

In Roslavl Sector

Of the Roslavl sector, between Gomel and Smolensk, the Soviet communique said only the advance continued two to three miles with the capture of 80 populated places. But Moscow dispatches said Roslavl was under immediate threat.

With the capture of Liubovka the Russians were but five and a half miles from the city.

In the southern Ukraine, the next few days were expected to settle the question of whether the Soviet summer offensive would be halted at the Dnieper River line.

In addition to reaching Pereyaskav, five miles from the river south of Kiev, the Russians were only 14 miles from the eastern bend at Dnepropetrovsk.

In the far south, the Russians already were within three miles of the Crimean railroad at Melitopol, but military sources in London pointed out this did not cut off the Nazi escape from the Crimea. Since their occupation of the Crimean Peninsula the Germans have completed a second single track railroad line across the Perekop land bridge northwest to Kherson.

German broadcasts took a gloomy view of the Russian fighting, announcing that "exceedingly heavy fighting on the Eastern Front underwent no weakening of the centers of gravity. German troops stood up to the furious onslaught of the Russians in a struggle which often demanded their last ounce of strength."

Guerilla forces which seized the Island of Rab were reported to have liberated 5000 political prisoners, 1700 of whom immediately joined the Patriots.

Meanwhile, Gen. Tito's headquarters announced that a national committee formed in Slovenia has proclaimed the incorporation of Slovene territory in Yugoslavia.

"National rights of Italian minorities will be recognized," said the announcement.

By John O'Reilly

New York Herald Tribune Correspondent Representing the Combined American Press.

(Distributed by the Associated Press)

With the Fifth Army in Italy, Sept. 19—(Delayed).—American troops advancing today near the bloody triangle between the Sele and Calore Rivers came upon 31 American infantrymen who had been trapped there for a week with Germans all around them.

It developed that these men were part of a unit which had been overrun by German tanks in the push which caused the Americans to withdraw and consolidate their lines during the early part of the battle for the Salerno beachhead. They had to remain hidden continually and were almost without food.

Complete Fatigue

Patrols moving up after dawn this morning saw the men walking wearily out of a woods. Their helmets identified them as Americans but their general appearance was one of complete fatigue.

Their uniforms were covered with dirt and sweat. Hollow eyes peered from behind beards stiff with dust. Their knees bent as they walked and although they still clung to their rifles they carried them as though they weighed a ton.

While resting and eating the canned rations the patrols gave them, they told how they and their comrades had lain hidden in the woods along the river for a week.

They dug holes over which they placed branches and leaves. They were out of ammunition and there was nothing else to do but try to escape detection. The Germans kept moving in and guns and tanks were set up less than 200 yards from their hiding place.

For three days they scarcely moved from their holes without anything to eat. At night they crawled to the river for water. After three foodless days they crossed the river at night. There were even more Germans on that side, but they managed to find an Italian garden with nothing in it but popcorn and onions.

They carried the onions and popcorn back to their holes and that was all they had to eat for a week. Then the American artillery offensive to drive out the Germans began.

Like Section of Hell

The 31 Americans stayed in their holes with shells falling all around them. Then wave after wave of medium bombers came over. The area became like a section of hell.

The bombardment finally ceased and the Germans began pulling out. They left without discovering that they had been almost living with their enemies for a week. This morning there was silence until the sound of American voices was heard, and the 31 crawled out from their holes on weakened legs to join their fellow-soldiers.

Allies Seize Aegean Islands; Italians Help in Occupation

By Stephen Barber
Associated Press Staff Writer

With British Occupation Forces, Dodecanese, Sept. 20 (Delayed).—The liberation of the Dodecanese and sister islands in the Aegean from German rule and opening of the backdoor to Hitler's European fortress has begun.

An Allied force arrived unobtrusively during the night on Lero, Castelrosso and Coo, and the Greek island of Samos, also were occupied.

These islands are the Germans' outer defense line in southeastern Europe.

To Assist Italians

"Our mission is partly to assist the Italians in the Dodecanese to carry out the armistice obligations by defending them (the islands) against German attack and partly for strategic reasons," said the senior British officer commanding this spearhead party, Brig. Francis Gerard Russel Brittorous. "It is a race between us and the Boche."

Already advanced elements including parachutists, an RAF regiment and commandos have seized key points in several islands.

The first to be occupied was Castelrosso at the far eastern tip of the Dodecanese chain. The occupation of Samos, Coo and Lero, the last of which Mussolini once called "the Malta of the Aegean," followed.

Natives Aid British

The Italians appear to be cooperating well on Lero today.

As I write sitting on a pile of concrete anchors—testimony surely to Italy's steel shortage—Italian heavy trucks and trailers are being loaded with British gear.

Everything has been planned to the last detail. The nucleus of the medical staff is moving into the local hospital. They have brought much needed medical supplies. A contingent of engineers, radiomen and other specialists accompanied the shock troops, the backbone of the mission.

More Canadians Reach England

An East Coast Canadian Port, Sept. 22. (AP)—Another huge draft of Canadian reinforcement troops and general units which left this port recently for Britain, hard on the heels of Allied successes in the Mediterranean that knocked Italy out of the war, has arrived safely, it was announced tonight.

Included were Norwegian soldiers and airmen and Netherlands fliers who had trained in the Dominion. There also were large drafts of Royal Navy and Royal Canadian Navy tars and officers.

Knox Commends Unity of 2 Navies

London, Sept. 22. (AP)—Secretary Knox returned to London today after a four-day tour on which he inspected American and British naval commands.

"Never have I witnessed a finer and more constructive degree of cooperation between officers and men of the two navies than I have seen evidenced on every hand here in Britain between British and American sailormen," Knox said.

War Sidelights

Lucky Pilot Must Have A Horseshoe

Tenth United States Air Force Headquarters in India, Sept. 22 (AP). Lieut. Gordon Wilson, 26, of Covington, Ky., hard-luck champion of the Tenth Air Force whose Liberator has been shot up on 16 out of 34 missions, declares, "I must have a horse shoe some place."

His latest mishap in a string starting 10 months ago occurred when Wilson, holder of the Air Medal and the DFC, returned from a tough mission without a single hole in his plane.

But the hydraulic system failed and Wilson circled for an hour while the landing gear was pumped down by hand.

His landing was perfect, but the right wheel collapsed. The wing and right rudder dug into the ground, the plane darting toward a combat movie photographer. Wilson halted the plane, named "Patches," barely 30 feet from the photographer, whose films may appear eventually in United States theaters.

Landis Arrives in London

London, Sept. 22 (AP).—James M. Landis, Director of Economic Operations in the Middle East with the rank of minister, arrived in London today, en route to Cairo, where he will take up his duties as principal American civilian representative in that Allied supply center. He will also act as a special assistant to U. S. Minister Alexander C. Kirk.

Kube Assassinated

London, Sept. 22 (AP).—The Berlin radio reported today Wilhelm Kube, commissioner general for "White Ruthenia," had been assassinated last night in Minsk. It was assumed here the Germans referred to White Russia, of which Minsk is the capital.

Germans Fail to Repair Bomb-Damaged Targets

London, Sept. 22 (AP).—No attempt has been made to repair the damage done to a large number of high-priority targets in Germany by the Allied aerial pounding, a Ministry of Economic Warfare official said today.

Despite the high priority that has been given to the construction of locomotives and rolling stock, the official added, reports to the ministry showed Germans were still behind schedule and production has not been adequate to keep pace with losses.

3 Killed in Plane Crash Into Aircraft Plant

Omaha, Sept. 22 (AP).—An Army bomber crashed through the roof of the Martin-Nebraska aircraft plant today, killing one aircraft employe at work in the plant, and the two airmen of the plane.

One other employe received serious injuries and a number suffered minor injuries. An Army representative said "considerable" damage was caused by fire that resulted from the crash.

Army Remains Loyal to King, Badoglio Says

By the Associated Press

Algiers, Sept. 22.—In a statement of the policy of his government, Marshal Pietro Badoglio declared today that the King and royal house of Italy express the will of the Italian people and the nation's armed forces remain faithful to King Vittorio Emanuele, obeying him exclusively.

Other points in the Italian premier's speech broadcast by the United Nation's radio were:

The Italian people wish to have nothing to do with fascism, be it called republican or monarchic.

The Italian people have not betrayed the Germans but have instead been betrayed themselves by the Nazi-Fascist gang.

The citizens and population of the north will never forget the thousands of their sons who were sent to die in Russia and the African deserts in the sole interest of Germany.

The conduct of the Germans after the armistice has rendered inevitable the action of the Italian people and deepens still more the gulf between Italy and Germany.

The sooner the Germans are forced out of Italy, the quicker Italy will be free.

Badoglio said the conditions of the armistice with the Allies were hard "but we must not forget that we have been beaten."

He added, however, "our armed reaction to the German aggression has brought us nearer to cooperation with the Allies."

2098 Bombers Lost By Allies in 8 Months

London, Sept. 22 (AP).—British Air Secretary Sir Archibald Sinclair told Commons today 1651 British and 447 American bombers, based in England, were reported lost over northern Europe during the eight months ended August 31.

He added 306 British and 100 American planes were lost during August and 195 British and 108 American craft in July.

Germany May Be Facing Gigantic Winter Aerial Assault From Africa, as Liberators Are Shifted From Britain

By Wes Gallagher
By the Associated Press

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, Sept. 22.—The transfer of American Liberator Squadrons from England to the North African war theater may foreshadow a winter aerial siege of Germany from the Mediterranean perhaps surpassing the effort made from Britain.

The B-24 Liberators, which previously operated wit hthe British-Based US Eighth Air Force, joined the Northwest African Air Forces yesterday and in their initial action in this area bombed the Corsican Harbor of Bastia and the Italian mainland city of Leghorn, leaving troop-crowded German ships and other small craft in both harbors aflame.

The Northwest African Air Forces under the Command of Lieut. Gen. Carl A. Spaatz now have a galaxy of heavy bombardment groups unequaled in any theater, except the home-based Royal Air Force fleets in England.

Winter weather already is hamstringing operations from Britain. During the winter it is considered good if heavy air bombardment fleets can get out in force eight times a month. In the Mediterranean, even during the worst winter months, it is possible to send out large bomber groups more than 15 times a month.

As a matter of fact, the bomb tonnage totals of the Northwest African air forces have dwarfed the US Eighth Air Force effort even during the past summer.

Bombing Germany from this side has obvious advantages. It splits the Nazis' thin fighter defenses, opens new territories in Germany to attack, makes it possible to hit the Nazis twice as often, thereby destroying the Germar air force faster, and it brings more pressure on the Germans' bomb-shattered morale.

Bombing fleets ranging over Rome, Turin, Milan and Naples by day and night did more than any other factor in cracking the Italian will to resist. Hitler's wobbly but vital Balkan Axis partners now face the same medicine. Every part of Hungary, Bulgaria and Rumania is well within bombing range from Italian bases.

Here are some of the key cities to the German war effort and the flying distance to them from air bases south of the Rome and Foggia areas:

Vienna, less than 400 miles; Munich, less than 400 miles; Budapest, less than 400 miles; Belgrade, 300 miles; Sofia, 350 miles, the Ploesti oil fields in Rumania, 500 miles, and Salonika, 250 miles.

All these points can be reached by Fortresses, Wellingtons and Liberators with full bomb loads. Some of the points are within the range of medium American bombers such as Maurauders and Mitchells.

These factors, combined with the fact that the German air force in the Mediterranean has been beaten into the ground by the air fighters of Spaatz, and Air Chief Marshal Sir Arthur William Tedder, makes it advantageous to shift a large share of the air war against Germany to this theater.

The Liberator shift made certain that Hitlerland is going to get a winter air offensive unparalleled in modern war.

In the Mediterranean the technique of "pattern bombing" has been further developed. The effect of this pattern bombing—delivered from a great number of ships flying in formation—when used against cities is far greater than the effect from the same tonnage of bombs dropped at random.

For example, a Flying Fortress carrying eight 500-pound bombs and dropping them 150 yards apart will devastate an arear at least 100 yards wide and 1200 yards long. When scores of Fortresses fly side by side whole sections of cities can be leveled.

This method has been used on small towns harboring German troops in Italy, and in Battipaglia, where it was tried on a small scale, every building in the town was leveled, troops entering the place reported. The method makes it impossible to waste bombs by dropping them in the same place.

Russia Appoints High Official to French Committee

London, Sept. 22 (AP).—Soviet Russia has appointed high ranking Andree J. Vishinsky, vice commissar of foreign affairs, as envoy plenipotentiary to the French National Committee at Algiers, an authority said today.

A British official said it was understood Vishinsky's task specifically was with the Mediterranean Allied Commission.

Appointment of a Soviet envoy to the French committee would mean the Russians have stolen a diplomatic march on Britain and the United States, which thus far have accorded the committee only limited recognition.

Italians Have Released 20,000 War Prisoners

London, Sept. 22 (AP).—The Morocco radio, in a broadcast recorded tonight by the Associated Press, said 20,000 American and British prisoners had been liberated by the Italians and have joined Italian patriots despite Field Marshal Erwin Rommel's offer of 1800 lire reward for each prisoner handed over to the Germans.

The Morocco broadcast added that 3000 American and British prisoners also had crossed into Switzerland.

18 Million Soldier Baby Fund Voted

A unanimous House, facing a gallery packed with uniformed men voted some 18 and a half million dollars yesterday to help wives of service men meet the costs of a bumper baby crop this year.

Debate ranged from socialized medicine, Harry Hopkins, birth control and the milk problem to the subject Chairman Cannon (Democrat) of Missouri, of the Appropriations Committee was trying to settle. Finally, after one member admitted to blushing at the turn discussion had taken, members settled down to appropriating exactly $18,620,000 which it is estimated will take care of all expenses of 220,000 wives at some $84.50 per baby.

The vote—a roll call—was exactly 338 to 0. Members heard that application for free care from grants administered by the States and handled by the Children's Bureau had doubled since March. From the committee report it was anybody's guess whether the birth rate among wives of servicemen had doubled or whether applications for free care had doubled.

At any rate wives of men in the Army and Marine Corps from and including sergeants and privates, wives of men in the Navy from petty officer second class down will be permitted, if the Senate approves, to have their babies at Uncle's expense.

Commitments made in States up to October 1 of this year for care of the wives of enlisted men up through the grades of master sergeant will be met, but the House agreed to a committee amendment to strike out help for the three grades of enlisted men ftc. hearing that master sergeants sometimes earned more than captains.

Representative Randolph (Democrat) of West Virginia tried to get in a word for the forgotten Army man—the noncommissioned officer in the top three grades who is on the detached enlisted men's list. He pointed out that a staff sergeant on DEML received less than a DEML buck sergeant because the three top grades in this service, by Army order, do not receive the $37.50 a month for dependents' quarters paid to men in those grades in any other service.

Lieut. Wiley of WAVES Is Given High Post

Lieut. Tova Petersen Wiley has been appointed assistant director of the WAVES, effective October 11, the Navy announced yesterday.

She now is on duty in San Francisco. Her husband, Lieut. James Wiley, is on duty at a base in the Pacific.

Jap Agent Fined, Gets Year and Day

New York, Sept. 22 (AP).—John C. Le Clair, 41, former New York and New Jersey College instructor, was sentenced to a year and a day imprisonment and fined $9000 in Federal Court today. He had pleaded guilty to an indictment charging him with acting as an unregistered paid agent of the Japanese government.

The fine equaled the total received by Le Clair from the Japanese from July, 1938, until June, 1941, for articles of a pro-Japanese nature which he wrote and which were distributed to numerous American newspapers and periodicals.

We know what we're fighting this war for . . . and we're here to see it thru!

The only thing that worries guys like us, is the thought of the folks back home. We just hope and pray that they're not suffering any hardships."

That's what our boys are thinking . . . boys who are giving their blood and their lives! They offer no complaints. They even give us the credit for making sacrifices!

We cannot let them down . . . we must shoulder our responsibilities on the home front . . . and live up to the qualities they give us credit for.

Sergt. Bang, Of Arlington, Lost in Action

Staff Sgt. Charles Francis Bang, 19, only son of Mrs. Wade D. Willey, 1400 S. Edgewood st., Arlington Village, Va., is missing in action over Germany, the War Department has informed his mother.

BANG

On August 27, Sgt. Bang, an Army Air Force tail gunner who has been awarded the Air Medal and two Oak Leaf Clusters, wrote his family from England, "I've just about completed my quota and will be coming home to see you all."

In the two months since he left American soil for "somewhere in England," the 19-year-old gunner had seen action in 20 bombing missions, and had been credited with shooting down an enemy plane.

A student at Washington Lee when he enlisted in the Air Force almost a year ago, Bang had combined his studies with a British Purchasing Commission job.

In June of this year, just before he was to leave the advanced gunnery school in Wendover, Utah, for overseas action with his crew ("Double Trouble," they called their Flying Fortress), the young gunner broke his ankle and was left behind. Persistent pleading with his commanding officers, however, resulted in special orders, and, crutches and all, Bang was put aboard an air transport and sent to England to rejoin his buddies.

"I wouldn't want to go on without those fellows," he wrote his mother. "They're just the swellest bunch of guys."

But two months later, in August, "something happened" to "Double Trouble" and its crew during an engagement and Bang was transferred to a Fortress called "The Flying Circus."

It was presumably with the "Circus" that he made his last recorded flight.

Freed Nations' Relief Plan Done

its power of appropriations.

All commitments and agreements by members of this huge relief organization are to be in accord with the constitutional procedures of each nation, another provision to head off congressional criticism.

The draft, which was submitted yesterday to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, is being sent to Allied governments for approval.

Members of the subcommittee which has been studying the proposition all summer are Senators Connally (Democrat) of Texas, chairman; Green (Democrat) of Rhode Island; Elbert D. Thomas (Democrat) of Utah, LaFollette (Progressive) of Wisconsin and Vandenberg (Republican) of Michigan.

It was on motion of Vandenberg that the Foreign Relations Committee decided upon an investigation of whether the agreement was in the nature of a treaty.

Congress Authorization

Since the setup obviously will require funds it was held yesterday that congressional authorization, similar to that given the Lend-Lease Act would be necessary.

In the new draft the director general would not be responsible to the United States Government or to the State Department here but to the whole body of the United Nations forming the organization.

Extremely complicated and broad in scope, the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration will deal with immediate relief problems in nations liberated by the Allies, and attempt to aid them in reestablishing industry and agriculture.

Mother of Five Fighting Men Urges Defeat of Wheeler Bill to Shield Fathers for Draft

anyone could stop her.

"I feel Mr. Wheeler is evading the real issue here," she told startled committeemen. "It takes the heart out of mothers when you take all of their young men and exempt fathers who married since October 1940. These fathers you are trying to save—haven't they as much right to go as my sons and other mothers' sons?"

Pointing to Baruch, she continued: "That man is right. As Mr. Baruch says, we need to do things and do them now or we'll find we have nothing to fight for."

Her voice broke as she told the committee she had four sons in the service, one with the Army in New Guinea and another on a naval destroyer. A fifth son, she said, was about to be drafted.

"You know 18-year-old boys haven't matured yet," she sobbed. "What's the use of fighting a war if you exempt other men who should be fighting it?"

Wheeler flushed, but said nothing. Baruch cupped his ear to catch every word. Gallant Chairman Reynolds asked the woman to step forward and give her name. This she declined to do at first, and then whispered si so lowly that reporters failed to catch it. "I didn't come here for notoriety," she said, "I came here for justice." She said she lived in Maryland but declined to name the place.

Plainly pleased by the unexpected backing, Baruch stepped over to her and shook her hand.

Reynolds restored order long enough to recess the hearing and announced that Baruch will return this afternoon for further questioning by Wheeler. This was done at the Montanan's request.

The retired financier and mobilization adviser in two wars had renewed the manpower recommendations in his recent West Coast report, had again warned against taking key defense workers in lieu of fathers, and had vigorously advised the committee either to take Marshall's advice "or throw him out."

"The man in charge of the job should be given our unqualified support," Baruch told the committee. "No cheese paring. No trading down. Give him what he needs. In such a matter it is better to be safe than sorry."

He referred to General Marshall's testimony last week that the Army and Navy needed 1,221,000 more men before January 1, and he took the word of Selective Service that number can't be raised without drafting 446,000 fathers.

Baruch said he had known and respected the Army Chief of Staff for 25 years and that Admiral Ernest J. King, chief of the fleet, also was "an exceptional man."

"All my life I have believed in granting authority and means when responsibility is delegated," he said. "There must be reasons given for the methods employed but, after all, the best proof of method if the result—and we have no quarrel with our war achievements in the past 22 months. Remember this: Records stand, opinions die."

Wheeler questioned Baruch for most of the afternoon, sticking closely to phases of the recent Baruch report disclosing wastage of manpower in West Coast plants, and hammering away at his point that if labor "hoarding" was abolished by efficient organization of manpower, it would not be necessary to draft fathers. The Montanan said he took no issue with Marshall on the "size" of the Army, but did not regard the Army as "infallible."

The Wheeler bill blocking the fathers' draft, on which the hearings were called, was almost overlooked until Chairman Andrew May of the House Military Committee, suggested they get "to the issue." While Wheeler was still questioning, May left the committee, but Reynolds and Senate Majority Whip Lister Hill broke through for some questions on the fathers' draft measure.

"We must dig for men wherever we can get them," Baruch replied. "You can't fool with these Germans. They are war lords and war makers. . . . They are sitting in a central position ready to hit in any direction and come back. . . . We've got to have greater striking power all the time. We must hit 'em and hit 'em, until we finish them."

Rather than try to fix blame for mistakes in home front planning in the early stages of the war—"all of us must share that blame and myself particularly because I couldn't persuade anyone to take my advice"—the thing to decide quickly is "Where do we go from here—where do we go now?"

He said of course there were early mistakes because there was no time after Dunkirk and Pearl Harbor to frame a long-time plan. But Baruch contended methods of utilizing manpower "are improving" and his own West Coast recommendations for better utilization have been adopted by War Mobilizer James F. Byrnes. He said Byrnes "doesn't say very much—but he moves very quietly and very efficiently. . . . He is not only going to oil up the machinery, he is working out the differences, deciding what and why."

But he admonished the committee that two things are going to be necessary to fully use the Nation's manpower, (1) proper housing, hygiene and an irreducible amount of amusement at war plant communities, and (2) assurances similar to those given servicemen that those who leave secure jobs for war industries will get their old jobs back.

"We can't spare anybody if we do the job that lies ahead of us," he said. "Certainly we can't spare 5,500,000 fathers. We are going to need everyone of these men for war work."

Baruch said that "job" includes furnishing munitions as well as food to people taken out of the Axis yoke—the Italians today, the Yugoslavs and French tomorrow.

He said the No. 1 task is to "improve our efficiency, which we can do in all fields of endeavor," and the next: "Take from the civilians as much as is necessary but leave them their needs—not their fancied wants. All must be treated alike. There must be equality of sacrifice."

Army, Navy 'E' Presented to Briggs Plant

High-ranking Army and Navy officials paid tribute to the Briggs Clarifier Co. at its plants in Bethesda yesterday afternoon when the Army-Navy "E"—the first in Montgomery County was received by the firm at outdoor ceremonies attended by 1000 persons.

Rear Admiral C. H. Woodward, chief of the Incentive Division of the Navy, presented the "E" flag, and Maj. Gen. C. M. Wesson, senior assistant administrator in charge of the Division for Soviet Supplies, office of Lend-Lease Administrator, presented award pins to representatives of the wto plants and the main office for 500 employes.

Both Admiral Woodward and General Wesson declared the hardest part of fighting and production work lies ahead. They urged continued efforts in war production to win victory.

Work Declared Vital.

Introduced by Cecil Hopkins, assistant treasurer of the firm, Admiral Woodward emphasized the importance of oil in modern mechanized warfare and the value of the oil filters which the Briggs Company designed and manufactures.

"The development of the Briggs Clarifier Co. from a small producer of automotive filters in an old livery stable to a major Navy supplier typifies the way American industry has kept pace with demands of its fighting forces," declared Admiral Woodward.

One instance in which the company's ingenuity and research made itself felt in the war effort, Admiral Woodward stated, is the development of a new filteration material, "felted cellulose" with its accompanying saving of carbon steel.

"The 'E' has never been lightly regarded nor easily won and held in the fleet and today the same policy holds true as the men in the fleet share their emblem with the men and women upon the production line," re declared.

Victory in Plants

Receiving the award flag for the company, Chase Donaldson, president and veteran of the first world war, assured Admiral Woodward of the determination of every employe of Briggs to keep the 'E'.

"We all know," he said, "that today is only the beginning of the fight. It's up to us now to prove that we can follow a good start by a strong finish."

In his address, Gen. Wesson stated that because our forces are enjoying the first flush of victory is no reason for unbridled optimism.

"If we are to win the great, decisive battles of the future, they must first be won in industrial America, in plants like this, by men and women like you," he said.

The award of the "E" flag was accepted for the firm by Southwick Walbridge Briggs, general manager, and Chase Donaldson, president. James Davie Roberge, works manager, accepted the 'E' pins on behalf of the employes represented on the speakers platform by Roberge for the industrial plant, Harrison Nichols for refill plant and Georgia Regn for general offices. They in turn were presented to Lonnie Lawson, Joseph Barton, and William C. Ferguson, chairman of the Army-Navy 'E' committees, chosen in elections at the three locations.

Ceremonies were opened by the advance of colors by the National Guard of Honor, American Legion, Capt. James Clark, commanding, as the national anthem was played by the U. S. Navy School of Music Band under the direction of Bandmaster Herbert Weber.

The 'E' flag was raised by the color guard of Costello Post, American Legion under the command of Adjutant George Hardy. The Belgian Ambassador and his wife, the Count and Countess d'Avander Stratan-Ponthoz, were guests of honor.

Catholic University Holds Commencement

Members of Catholic University's senior class, attending special wartime commencement exercises yesterday, were congratulated by the Right Rev. Monsignor Patrick J. McCormick, university vice rector, for completing a four-year course in three years.

"It should be stated to your credit and for your gratification," he declared, "that it has been our experience under the accelerated program to find that students have worked more seriously, more diligently and with greater appreciation than in normal times."

Exercises in the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception were preceded by a mass celebrated by the Rev. Dr. George B. Stratemeier, university chaplain.

The graduates included:

Lion Kills Brother Fighting for Meat

New York, Sept. 22 (AP).—A five-year-old lion, Johnnie, was dead at Bronx Zoo today, victim of his brother's hunger for an 8-pound chunk of horse meat.

As 60 spectators ringed the African Plains Exhibit at feding time yesterday, William Dalton tossed pieces of raw meat to five lions, all brothers. Harry and Johnnie leaped for the same piece and proceeded to fight it out.

The clawing and biting lasted about five seconds, and Johnnie retreated with the meat. Lying down, he pawed at his mouth and throat and then was still. A third lion took the meat.

Dr. Leonard J. Goss, veterinarian, found Johnnie died from a fractured larynx. The lions, obtained from Frank Buck, had been quartered together since 1940.

Nelson Reports Amazing Gains in Combat Plane Output

models including all types of heavy bombers increased in August.

Simultaneously, it was learned that production of aircraft and related munitions represented more than 30 per cent of the total war production program—approximately double a year ago. The aircraft program is expected to make up 42 per cent of the total next year, it was learned.

The report commented that the aircraft industry's labor productivity has increased 25 per cent during the past eight months.

Nelson stated that August aircraft production would have been greater but for design changes.

"Our production rate has now grown to a point where interruptions for design changes can be made without seriously threatening the flow of planes to the fighting fronts," the report said.

The report was finally cleared through the Office of War Information after Nelson had departed for London to confer with British production officials. Final clearance had been delayed because War Department officials contended it was "too optimistic."

Perhaps as a cautionary note to satisfy the military, the report pointed out: "In spite of this production progress, we are still short of current aircraft schedules. Employment shortages continue to hamper production."

Commenting on the over-all record—a 4 per cent increase in production over July, Nelson said, "the performance of August indicates that production appears to be getting its second wind. The movement away from the level of the spring months started in July, but the August showing indicates that production is regaining its momentum."

The production index climbed 28 points—the average monthly climb before the spring slump.

Signal equipment increased 30 per cent, naval ship construction 4 per cent, merchant ships 1 per cent, self-propelled artillery 23 per cent, antiaircraft guns and equipment 4 per cent.

Eden Hopeful Of Full 'Big 3' Accord Soon

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

London, Sept. 22.—Declaring that the next few months will give an opportunity to Great Britain, the United States and Russia to reach a lasting understanding, Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, speaking in Commons today, frankly told the Russians that they must do their share to bring about a full accord.

"Confidence cannot be created by one side alone," Eden said, adding that Britain has done "more than her fair share" to bring about agreement.

He quoted an editorial in a Russian newspaper, "War and the Working Classes," which showed, he said, that Britain's point of view was not understood in Russia. "I can honestly say that we do not feel that we have anything to reproach ourselves with in an effort to give effect to the Anglo-Soviet treaty signed last year."

"Our Russian friends say to us—and frequently—that we do not understand them. On these occasions they express themselves clearly, even forcibly.

"I make no complaint about that, but there are times also when we feel that they do not understand our point of view and I believe it to be in the ultimate interest of our good relations that we should speak out to each other on these occasions.

"There can be no one-sided understanding. The Russians must give their full contribution."

Surveying the prospects of the three-power conference between Britain, United States and Russia at which he will represent the British government, Eden said he hoped it would prepare the way "for that greater event, the meeting of Marshal Stalin, President Roosevelt and our own Prime Minister."

Franco Is Warned

By the Associated Press

London, Sept. 22.—Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden disclosed in Commons today that Sir Samuel Hoare, British ambassador to Spain, had warned Generalissimo Franco that the presence of the Spanish Blue Division on the Russian front was a "serious obstacle to development of cordial Anglo-Spanish relations."

He said, the government is constantly reviewing the situation in Tangier, where the Spaniards unilaterally took control of the international zone in 1940, and takes a "serious view" of the use being made of the zone by German agents.

Questioned by a member about the proposed journey of President Eduard Benes of the Czechoslovakian government in exile to Moscow for the signing of a treaty of alliance, Eden said the trip had been called off.

In making this disclosure, Eden said Britain and Russia had decided jointly not to make any postwar agreements with any of their European allies for the present.

Eden said he wanted to see in Italy itself a government "as broadly based as possible including all elements and all parties which were not Fascist in character."

Britain.

Utilization of land, sea and air elements in the Finschhafen attack emphasized the type of warfare which General MacArthur believes will fold up the Japanese the quickest. It has only been recently, however, as in the pincer envelopment of Lae, that the fleet has been able to play much of a role.

The two enemy airdromes on New Britain nearest to Finschhafen—Cape Gloucester and Gasmata—were heavily raided.

The main target in the Madang sector, northwest of Finchhafen, was Japan's coastal supply road. Four more bridges were added to the four blown to bits in raids there Monday. Points where troops are bivouacked and supply installations also were hit.

These planes, bombers with a fighter escort, likewise met no enemy air opposition, attesting to the effectiveness of recent raids on enemy airdromes around Wewak.

Planes also sank a 1500-ton cargo vessel off Kavieng, New Ireland. At the other end of New Ireland, a 5000-ton Japanese merchant vessel was bombed and set afire off Cape St. George by an Allied reconnaissance plane.

The communique announced the loss of the Allied transport-freighter John Penn at Guadalcanal. It was bombed and sunk while returning there recently after landing troops and cargo at a forward base.

Nimitz Reveals Damage

By the Associated Press

Pearl Harbor, T. H., Sept. 22.—Admiral Chester W. Nimitz disclosed today that four Japanese bases were bombed and damaged heavily in the raid last Saturday night and Sunday (East longitude time) on enemy-held territory in the Gilbert Island area.

Nimitz, commander in chief of the Pacific fleet, revealed also that a carrier task force collaborated with land-based Army and Navy bombers in the coordinated operation, which covered 500 square miles of Japan's equatorial outpost holdings in the central Pacific.

The Navy and Army bombers made more than 200 sorties against Tarawa, Makin and Apamama Islands in the Gilbert group and against Nauru Island 400 miles southwest of Makin.

Four fighter planes shot down were the only losses suffered by our striking forces in the attack, despite heavy antiaircraft fire and attempted interception by enemy fighters and night fighters, Nimitz said.

The operation was the first of an offensive nature attempted by United States forces in the Pacific employing both carrier planes and heavy bombers from land bases both in the south Pacific and central Pacific areas.

In a communique supplementing a previous bare report that just Tarawa and Nauru were attacked, Nimitz said:

"Damage to the enemy included:

"At Tarawa—Airdrome facilities heavily damaged, eight bombers destroyed on the runway, one small vessel sunk;

"At Makin—Air base damaged, three four-engined seaplanes and one other patrol plane destroyed;

"At Apamama—Enemy camp installations heavily hit;

"At Nauru—Damage to installations.

"In addition to destroying aircraft on the ground, our forces shot down six Zeros, probably destroyed four others and damaged eight more fighters, and shot down two medium bombers.

"Despite attempted interception by day and night fighters and intense antiaircraft fire encountered, our losses totaled only four planes."

Four Area Priests Honored by Pope

Richmond, Va., Sept. 22 (AP).—Four priests of the Catholic Diocese of Richmond have been honored by Pope Pius XII, the Most Rev. Peter L. Ireton, Coadjutor Bishop of Richmond, has been informed in a letter from Archbishop A. G. Cicognani, apostolic delegate to United States.

Those honored are the Very Rev. Leon J. Ryan, V. G., rector of the Sacred Heart Cathedral, Richmond; the Very Rev. Fred P. Lackey, V. F., pastor of St. Joseph's Church, Martinsburg, W. Va.; the Rev. James A. Brennan, pastor of St. Patrick's Church, Richmond, and the Rev. William A. Gill, pastor of St. Vincent de Paul's Church, Newport News. All the foregoing have been appointed domestic prelates to Pope Pius with the title of the right reverend monsignor.

Capital Still Puzzled About MacArthur

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

Gen. Douglas MacArthur's statement for his southwest Pacific headquarters, in which he said that no matter how "subordinate" his role in the future he hoped to play it "manfully," was the talk of Washington yesterday.

Some people were so astonished that they were sure that MacArthur had been misquoted. This apparently was not the case; the general's statement was carefully prepared and formally issued to all reporters at his headquarters.

Mingled with the astonishment here was a good deal of puzzlement over many of the statements in MacArthur's agrieved blast, including his remark that "island-hopping" was not his idea of how to win the war quickly and as cheaply as possible.

Two Groups Comment

Possible explanations of General MacArthur's statement came from two groups.

Military men, who believe they understand the hero of Bataan, suggested that it was primarily an attempt on his part to get more stuff for his offensive—more troops, more planes, more ships.

Politicians advanced the idea that MacArthur was thinking of 1944, despite his earlier disavowal that he had any aspirations to be President. Some of these recalled that a recent Gallup Poll showed MacArthur, pitted against President Roosevelt in a "trial heat," running as strong a race as Wendell Willkie and nearly as strong a race as Gov. Thomas E. Dewey.

The military men, scoffing at this, thought that the genesis of MacArthur's statement was the appointment of Lord Louis Mountbatten to command the southeast Asia front—or, better, the interpretation put on this appointment by certain American newspapers. These newspapers suggested that Mountbatten would overshadow MacArthur in the drive against Japan. What they had to say was dispatched to Australia and apparently played up in the newspapers there.

On top of this a group of United States Senators visited General MacArthur headquarters, and over the weekend one of them—Senator Albert B. (Happy) Chandler (Democrat) of Kentucky—urged that MacArthur be made supreme commander of all forces in the Pacific and Asia, including Burma, India and China.

It was suggested here that these two things, the press reports that he was to be overshadowed by Mountbatten and possibly some "needling" from the Senators, led to General MacArthur's extraordinary statement—a statement that was being deplored as "unfortunate" yesterday by Sydney, Australia, newspapers.

General MacArthur's military friends concluded that, whatever the circumstances, he must have been worried lest too much stuff be diverted to Mountbatten. If he wasn't eager to get all he could in the way of troops and weapons, they said, they would not look upon him as the great soldier they know him to be.

Sydney Papers Protest

And yet they expressed the opinion that he was wrong in seeing any conflict or competition between his own front and that which Mountbatten is to command. Actually, they said, the two offensives—Mountbatten's drive against Burma or Malaya and MacArthur's in the general direction of the Philippines—would be dovetailed. As for MacArthur's strictures against "island-hopping," this strategy, they pointed out, had been vetoed by President Roosevelt as far back as last winter.

In Australia yesterday the Sydney Mirror asked for a clarification of the commands of General MacArthur and Lord Mountbatten. The Sydney Herald said it "regrets that MacArthur has seen fit to comment publicly on rumors recently circulated in the United States regarding future strategy in the Pacific."

Japan Planning to Evacuate Tokyo Because of 'Serious War Situation'

By the Associated Press

London, Sept. 22.—Japan is getting ready to evacuate Tokyo and other important cities "in view of the decisive phase upon which the war will enter during the coming months," the Tokyo radio said today.

Gloomily forecasting new serial blows against the Japanese homeland, the broadcast said Premier Hideki Tojo announced that the Japanese government had decided to prepare "for the moving of government departments, industrial establishments and the civilian population" from Japan's major cities "in the interest of improving their defense."

Special emphasis was laid on antiaircraft defenses particularly the "air protection in industrial areas."

Tojo warned the Japanese people that a "time of emergency" was at hand and declared that far-reaching measures were required to strengthen the empire's home front "in view of the serious war situation."

Stinging Japanese defeats in the Aleutians, the Solomon Islands and New Guinea, coupled with a serious depletion of Japan's air power and shipping, were believed to have prompted the series of drastic measures.

Aside from the evacuation of Japanese cities, the program approved by the Tojo cabinet in an all-day session yesterday called for:

1. Total mobilization of the civilian population.

2. Abolishment of age limits to make all persons liable for national service. Mobilization of students will no longer be deferred, and the "employment of woman labor will be extended."

3. Strengthening of government control over all industry.

4. "Strict self-sufficiency of Japan and Manchukuo as regards food must under all circumstances be assured." (This apparently was a reference to Japan's shortage of shipping.)

5. Centralization of traffic on land and water.

6. "The nation's entire strength must be concentrated on the armaments industry, especially on the strengthening of the Japanese air force."

7. "Plans for a thorough-going consolidation of defenses of the Japanese motherland must be drawn up without delay." (This seemed to indicate fears of an actual invasion of Japan itself.)

8. Cancellation of all holidays.

9. Simplification of all government machinery and industry and cancellation of all administrative activity "deemed unnecessary for the conduct of the war."

"The Japanese nation in all its classes and professions must fully understand the seriousness of the present internal and external situation and must be inspired by an unbending will to victory," the announcement said.

Final Services Tomorrow for Chas. C. Broy

Funeral services for Charles Clinton Broy, 56, former United States consul to Brussels, Belgium, who died here Tuesday, will be held tomorrow at 2 p. m. in Chamber's Georgetown funeral home, 3072 M st. nw.

The Rev. C. B. Austin, pastor of Georgetown Baptist Church, will officiate, and four officers of the State Department will be honorary pallbearers. They will be Howard K. Travers, Edgar Allen Shreve, Dwight Fisher, and Thomas G. Spence.

The Secretary of State, in announcing Mr. Broy's death, praised his long and faithful service.

Mr. Broy, 524 North Monroe, Arlington, Va., had been employed in the visa division of the State Department since returning here in 1941. He never fully recovered from injuries received in an automobile accident while making an official trip between Cologne and Brussels in late August, 1940.

Entering the foreign service in 1909 as an assistant consul, he subsequently served as consul at Boma, Milan, Dublin, Cobb, Cherbourg, Nassau and London before assuming the post in Brussels.

He was a member of the American Foreign Service Association, the University Club of Washington and a Mason.

Mr. Broy is survived by his wife, Mrs. Cecil Norton Broy, and three children, all of Arlington: Anne Norton, Beverly Hite, and James William, and two sisters, Berenice Hite Broy and Mrs. Augustus Heath Martin, both of Washington.

Yanks Reach Last Barrier Before Naples

plas. Montecorvino-Rovella, capture of which was reported in field dispatches yesterday, is 12 miles east of Salerno.

A funeral pall of smoke shrouded the great metropolis of Naples. Allied troops 12 miles across the bay on the Sorrento Peninsula could see large fires burning in and near the city of 925,000. The Germans appeared to be burning, destroying and looting anything that would be valuable to the oncoming Allies. The enemy had established strong defense lines on the southern and eastern approaches of Naples, which were under constant pressure.

The British Eighth Army captured Potenza, which an Allied spokesman likened to "a man's heart so far as that part of Italy is concerned—it is the center of everything."

Five primary roads radiate from Potenza. The city of 25,000 lies 56 miles east of Salerno, 64 miles southwest of Allied-held Bari on the Adriatic, and 58 miles inland from the Gulf of Taranto.

Many German motor convoys had been seen fleeing northward from Potenza in recent days. Its fall meant that all lower Italy was dominated by the Allies.

A small British patrol had boldly stowed on an Italian train and reached the outskirts of Potenza three or four days before it fell. The British hid in the hills and furnished information of German activity which "was instrumental in our capture of the town," a headquarter's spokesman said.

Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark's American and British troops of his Fifth Army fanned out steadily and cautiously north and northeast of Salerno. They encountered heavy German artillery and mortar fire. East of Salerno, only small rearguard detachments were encountered.

The Germans were in strong mountain positions guarding Naples. Their continued control of volcanic Mt. Vesuvius and its bottleneck coastal routes presented General Clark with much the same strategic problem that Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery had in Sicily in the final coastal drive upon Messina past Mt. Etna.

"The first phase of the Salerno battle now is definitely over," the military spokesman said, "We have inflicted upon the enemy heavy losses in killed and captured and in equipment. Many prisoners have been taken who were Poles, Czechs and others impressed into Hitler's army. This would appear to indicate a serious German manpower shortage. The terrain we now have entered is more difficult than anything we encountered in Tunisia or Sicily."

The frantic German demolitions in Naples and nearby showed the enemy was well aware of the importance of the last mountain barrier he holds before the broad lowlands leading directly into Naples. Approaches to the city were heavily mined. The present fighting area was so rugged that Allied troops had to haul their heavy equipment by hand up steep sides of mountains, through gorges and ravines.

(The Berlin radio said the Fifth Army was constantly being reinforced and already had ten divisions. Fighting at present was described as local. Clark was said to be concentrating large artillery forces before allowing his divisions to 'launch new large-scale attacks in areas no longer within naval artillery range." The British Eighth Army was said to have occupied an east-west line from Altamura through Potenza to Buccino.)

Allied air power intervened not only in Naples and Corsica battles, but in the extreme eastern Mediterranean as well.

British planes attacked German airdromes near the Greek capital of Athens, on Crete and on Rhodes—Queen Island of the Dodecanese.

Rail and road bridges at Benevento, Capua and Cancello in the Naples area were bombed. Troop concentrations, transports and gun emplacements in the battle zone were hit. Four planes were lost, two of them in the eastern Mediterranean.

French troops, Corsican patriots, the Americans and many of the 40,000 Italians garrisoning the French island were inflicting particularly heavy losses on the Germans fleeing Corsica.

New Allied Gains

2 Who Tried to Kill Duce Freed

With the Allied Armies in Italy, Sept. 19 (Delayed).—Two men who many years ago attempted to assassinate Benito Mussolini and were condemned to life imprisonment have been released by Allied authorities from notorious penal islands but one of them, by a ghastly mischance, was killed by a German shell just seven days after he had been at liberty for the first time in 16 years.

The victim was the less well-known of the two. He was an anarchist named Lucetti who, in the early days of the Fiscist regime, threw a bomb at the Duce, but missed.

Lucetti was confined on the island of Santo Steffano and was freed by Allied forces September 10. He was taken to the island of Ischia and was awaiting transportation when he was killed by a German shell on September 17.

Far more famous was Col. Tito Zaniboni who was on the Island of Ponza when he was liberated.

Zaniboni was one of Italy's World War heroes. He was colonel of a regiment of Alpine troops which all combatants in the last war recognized as one of the best fighting units in the world. He had every decoration for valor that Italy could give.

In 1927 he made up his mind that thebest thing he could do for Italy would be to kill Mussolini. He bought the finest high-powered hunting rifle with telescope sights.

One of the few places the Duce could be relied upon to appear in public during the first half of the Fascist regime was the balcony of Palazzo Ghigi, which Mussolini used to use as his prime ministerial office.

Zaniboni finally managed to rent a room about 100 yards from the Chigi balcony and overlooking it. He had practiced with his hunting rifle until he could hit a dime at 100 yards. Mussolini was a doomed man. Zaniboni lived in his room and waited for Mussolini to come out.

It was not to be. Zaniboni had entrusted his secret to one man, but that was one man too many.

His friend became panic-stricken at the last tminute and just before Mussolini appeared on the balcony agents of Mussolini's secret police broke into Zaniboni's room and overpowered him.

Resolution Passed by Legion Criticizes Rep. Hamilton Fish to persons on the mailing list of C. Leon de Aryan."

The resolution identified de Aryan as editor of The Broom, and declared he was under indictment for sedition but now was out on bail.

The envelope, added the resolution, contained a reprint of remarks by Fish on proposed amendments to the alien and sedition act of the United States.

These amendments, the resolution declared, "would make it impossible for the United States Government to obtain conviction against certain persons now indicted for sedition and would cripple the Department of Justice in its efforts to convict enemies of the United States."

Congress Asked to Act

The resolution called upon members of Congress to take action against mis-use of the frank, and directed the Legion commander to ask the Attorney General of the United States to take steps "to forever put to an end the misuse of the franking privilege by members of Congress."

Viereck, an alleged pro-German propagandist, was sentenced last month to serve one to five years for violation of the foreign agents registration act.

Earlier, William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, in a speech, pledged the A. F. L.'s full resources "to prevent a single moment's interruption in our production task." He asserted that Legion spokesmen "have at times been guilty of rash and unreasonable statements" with respect to organized labor's war effort.

The AFL leader was followed on the stand by Legion National Commander Roane Waring of Memphis who declared that "the overwhelming majority of organized labor . . . are as fine American citizens as exist."

"But there is a small minority," he went on, "a very small minority, but a dengerous minority of highjackers and racketeers who are seeking to crush organized labor and the American Legion will not stand for that."

Green referred to "a terrible beating" he said labor was taking in public opinion because of isolated strikes, and defended his own AFL workers of whom he said 99.9 per cent "religiously kept" the no-strike pledge made to President Roosevelt.

"The no-strike record of American workers during this war is better than that of labor in any other free country in the world," he said.

"Labor is suffering under no illusion despite recent victories in Sicily, Italy and in the Pacific. We have a hard task to perform. We are approaching the real test.

"Labor is ready to work and to fight harder and to provide the soldiers with all the things they need to defeat the enemy."

"There are more than two million union members now serving in the armed forces of our country," he declared. "The great army of workers whose duty it is to serve at home on the production front are backing them up to the limit.

Oscar W. Lamp, Los Angeles, Calif., was elected Chef de Chemin de Fer of the Forty and Eight, play and honor society of the legion, today.

Others elected included Charles W. Ardery, Arlington, Va., correspondant national.

The yellow-red leaves that blaze in the fall,
The racing gray squirrel, so wise, so small—
That's what I see in the barracks' wall!"
They'll be there later, soldier.
What do you see in this muddy sog,
Silent, tramping soldier?
"The lake at dawn with the curling fog,
The wild, wide look in the eyes of my dog,
The hard-set wings whistling over the bog—
That's what I see in this muddy sog!"
They'll be there later, soldier.
What do you see beyond the wire,
Silent, staring soldier?
"The flickering light of our old campfire,
An old pipe's gleam as the flame sings higher,
The pine's silhouette, a cathedral spire—
That's what I see beyond the wire!"
They'll be there later, soldier.
They'll be waiting for you, soldier,
When the battle smoke has blown away
And the guns are still at break of day,
When the ships ride quiet in the bay
And you come home, at last, to stay.
They'll be waiting for you, soldier.

Early Ruling Is Promised On Milk Prices

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

Economic Stabilization Director Fred M. Vinson yesterday promised an early decision in the Nation's milk price controversy, and it was believed his 'solution" would be a compromise plan granting subsidies on dairy feeds and retail price increases for milk in particular areas.

Congressmen who talked to him in closed conference recommended a Nation-wide increase of 1 cent a quart in the retail price selling as opposed to the Administration's advocacy of a subsidy that would prevent any increase in the cost of living.

Not Full Solution

They agreed, however, that the general price increase would not solve the whole problem as some regions are "in a much worse shape than others."

Meantime, it was revealed Vinson has approved a temporary subsidy of 50 cents per hundred pounds—slightly more than a cent per quart—for producers supplying the market in Memphis, Tenn. Petitions for increases from more than a dozen other markets are being held up until the overall plan for relief to dairy farmers is decided upon.

The stabilization director declined to comment on results of his meeting with approximately 25 Congressmen, but said War Food Administrator Marvin Jones was preparing a definite plan to meet the increasingly alarming milk production problem and would have it on Vinson's desk for action within a few days. He indicated it would call for a subsidy to cover increased feed costs.

Danaher Submits Plan

Senator Danaher (Republican) of Connecticut came to the meeting with a four-point milk plan of his own and Vinson promised to consider its provisions before announcing his decision.

The Danaher plan called for "treating milk as a special Nation-wide production problem," regional support prices for dairy products, retail price increases in areas "where such increases are definitely indicated," and either Government requisitioning of feed or purchase and resale of feed by the Commodity Credit Corporation.

Although support prices and Government purchase of feeds would involve subsidies, Danaher said he was "not scared by subsidies."

"The important thing is to get the milk we need," he declared. "It is a basic food that will become even more important as our diet shifts from meat to cereals during the war years."

Farmers Need Assurance

He said the support prices should be announced now for the winter months and for 1944 "so the dairy farmers will have some assurance as to the future." The retail price of milk is a separate question from the support prices, he declared, but "obviously should be raised in areas where it is jeopardizing production."

The important thing about feed, Danaher said, is that dairy farmers are unable to get it. The Government should give them a priority on its use, he declared, even if that meant taking it away from the farms where it is being fed to hogs and other livestock. He expressed opinion poultry raisers should get a second priority on feed as a boost to egg production. "It may cost the Government something to get the feed to the dairy centers and requisitioning might be necessary, but I submit the feed should be forthcoming whatever the cost."

Public to Get More Soap Soon, WFA Says

The War Food Administration yesterday announced increased amounts of fats and oils are being released to soap manufacturers and consumers can expect increased soap supplies "within a short time."

Soap production under the new quotas will equal that of prewar years. Recent absence of some types of soap from retail shelves "has been caused primarily by consumer hoarding on the basis of unfounded rumors," WFA declared.

Miss Birtwell Dies; Teacher Here Since 1905

Miss Elizabeth Birtwell, Eastern High School teacher since 1905, died Sunday at her home in Belle Haven, Va., after a short illness. She had attended a teachers' meeting on Friday, preparatory to the opening of school Monday.

A native Washingtonian, she attended Eastern High School and was graduated from Wellesley College with honors. She became a teacher at Eastern the year following, and had been for years the teacher in charge of the English department. She was faculty adviser of the school paper, chairman of the college committee, and a student adviser.

N. Y. Grand Jury Warns of Alien Postwar Influx

New York, Sept. 22 (AP).—A Federal grand jury which has spent 16 months investigatong cases involving the German-American Bund, immigration and naturalization, says the United States will be placed in the "gravest jeopardy" after the war unless immigration laws are tightened.

Predicting an unprecedented influx of aliens, the jury recommended in a presentment yesterday that the Nation adopt a system of "selective immigration," excluding all except those considered likely to contribute to the welfare of the country.

"The paramount consideration," the jury said, "is the welfare of the United States and not that of the immigrant."

NERVOUS INDIGESTION
"Pepto-Bismol is good for that"
Is your stomach on the warpath from war jitters, worry and overwork? Sufferers from jumpy, nervous indigestion find that PEPTO-BISMOL helps bring prompt relief from heartburn, distress after meals, gas on the stomach. Tastes good and does good. Ask your druggist for PEPTO-BISMOL when your stomach is upset.

Amazing results in building STURDY BODIES!

YOUNG people, especially those of grammar and high school age, are prone to be deficient in stomach digestive juices and red-blood.
A growing-person who is operating on a 63 to 70% healthy blood volume or a stomach digestive capacity of only 30 to 60% normal is severely handicapped.
In such cases Nature needs extra help. Organic troubles or focal infection, if they exist, must be corrected. Tissue foods must be digested and rich, red-blood must be present to build sturdy bodies.
SSS Tonic is especially designed to build-up BLOOD STRENGTH when deficient . . . and to promote those STOMACH JUICES which digest the food so the body can make proper use of it in tissue building and repair.
These two important results enable the body to make use of the food as Nature intended. Thus you may gain a keen appetite . . . firm flesh . . . body energy . . . mental alertness!
Build Sturdy Health and Help America Win
Thousands and thousands of users have testified to the benefits SSS Tonic has brought to them and scientific research shows that it gets results—that's why so many say "SSS Tonic builds sturdy health—makes you feel like yourself again." At drug stores in 10 and 20 oz. sizes. ©S.S.S.Co.

A MAN AND A RAILROAD
—they're guided by the same code

We all know someone like Ed Bell. That's not his name, but it will serve.

Ed was doing pretty well in business fifteen years ago. He was working hard, looking ahead, had rosy plans for the future.

But along came the depression and you know what happened. Borrowing, debts, a struggle to keep going.

Ed stayed at it. Slowly he's climbed back on his feet. Today he's working in a war plant—working harder than he ever worked before.

He's got responsibilities, plenty of them, and recognizes them, too. Taxes to be paid. Debts to be paid off. War bonds to be bought.

And Ed has always put first things first. He likes to buy things for his family as much as any man, but he feels that the meeting of his obligations should come before anything else.

Many railroads have a similar history, and are now faced with the same kind of obligations.

They have been through a lot in recent years. High costs for labor, material and taxes, and low revenues due to depressed traffic. The average net earnings of all our railroads from the 1929 market crash to the attack on Pearl Harbor amounted to only a fraction over 2% per year on investment.

It is small wonder, then, that thirty-seven Class I railroads sought relief in bankruptcy. And that many others had a tight squeeze because of the burden of debt they carried.

In recent months railroad income has improved. Carrying the huge loads of war traffic, they averaged for 1942 about 5½% return on investment.

Now they are faced with the same question that confronted Ed Bell. Shall they pay out these earnings to their families of stockholders, or shall they use them to reduce their overpowering burden of debt—so that once again our railroads can become sound and solvent institutions?

In the interest of both their stockholders and the public most of our railroads — and this includes the Nickel Plate — are currently placing debt reduction first.

Early Brahms Works Given Spotlight

By Ray C. B. Brown

Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge Foundation in the Library of Congress presents on Wednesday night the third in a series of eight concerts devoted to the instrumental chamber music of Johannes Brahms. Artists: Frank Sheridan, piano; William Kroll, violin; Jashe Veissi, viola; Naoum Benditzki, violoncello. Program: Piano Trio in B major, Op. 8; Piano and Violoncello Sonata in E minor, Op. 38; Piano Quartet in A major, Op. 25.

As the cycle of Brahms' instrumental chamber music reached the third concert last evening in Coolidge Auditorium, it was the younger Brahms who dominated the program, for the three works presented were composed before he was 33. That admirable pianist, Frank Sheridan, had a part in them all and his colleagues were three members of the Coolidge Quartet: William Kroll, Naoum Benditzki and Jashe Veissi. The result of their collaboration was pleasant in the extreme both as to interpretative warmth and technical ease, and an appreciative audience told them so with emphatic applause.

BROWN

The B major Piano Trio represented Brahms as he was at twenty, when he confided in Albert Dietrich that when he was composing he liked to think of the words of lok songs, which suggested themes to him. The melodies in the trio sound that way—as though they had sprung from poetry with a spontaneous impulse. The music is purely romantic with no admixture of conscious in tellectuation. This kind of writing does not sound so much composed as improvised, and Brahms retained to the end a certain amount of this inspiration.

Neither the E minor Piano and Violoncello Senate nor the A major Piano Quarters can be considered as other than romantic works, so suffused are they with emotion of an obviously personal nature. They speak of his tenderness, kindliness and sweetness—characteristics which the world did not always see as he grew older and more brusque in his dealings with men. Yet these traits underlie even his latest works, as though he reserved sentiments for his music while he outwardly bristled with sarcasm.

Volunteers Sought For Distribution Of 'A' Gas Books

Volunteers to work approximately 13,000 man hours to send out 133,000 basic "A" gasoline book renewals from the 16 District boards were sought by the OPA last night.

Volunteers were asked to register with the Civilian Defense Volunteer Office at 2324 F st. nw., where they will be assigned to their tasks in one of the boards, it was said.

Mrs. Harry S. Bernton, CDVO chief, said other appeals for volunteers will be made to build up a continuing organization of volunteers who would be ready to give their time when needed.

Mrs. Bennett To Be Honored At Rites Today

Funeral services for Mrs. Ada Jean Bennett, 55, who died Sunday will be held today at 2:30 p. m. in Calvary Baptist Church with pastors of many churches and persons connected with the Central Union Mission which she served for 28 years participating.

Marine Group Keeps Things Fit on Rendova

From scattered fronts in the southwest Pacific come these reports of our Marines, who find time for miscellaneous hell-raising and leathernecking, the war notwithstanding:

There are ten Marines on Rendova Island, who keep things running, despite wear, tear, shrapnel and bomb, reports Sergt. Samuel E. Stavisky, former assistant city editor on The Washington Post, and now a Marine Corps combat correspondent. Among them is Staff Sergt. Arna C. St. John, 21, of 1830 K st. nw.

They are the "Marine mobile jungle machine shop," and during the first days of American occupation in the Rendova-Munda area to them fell the job of coping with mechanical emergencies arising from the high-speed operations and from enemy bombing and strafing.

Ingenuity Required

Peacetime devotees of gadgets, thingamabobs and working doodads, what they lacked in academic knowledge these Marines made up in Yank ingenuity. And to these, the American forces owe the numerous trucks, jeeps, tractors, tanks, landing boats, and even a big bomber which were kept in working, running and flying condition.

Sergeant Robert S. Clements, attached to regimental headquarters of an artillery unit on Guadalcanal, fruitlessly waited three months for mail, and finally hit the jackpot. Seventeen letters arrived in a lump, 8 of them from his wife, Mrs. Helen Clements of 1495 Newton st. nw., and Teaneck, N. J.

And from "somewhere in the South Pacific," comes word of six adventure - seeking musicians, former members of the Marine Corps' Fifth Reserve Battalion band in Washington, and still together as a unit on field duty in the "islands."

The others include Sergt. William A. Rector, whose wife lives at 1829 Irving st. nw. and whose parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Rector, live at 727 Gallatin st. nw.; Corpls. Charles S. Cogswell, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Cogswell, 941 G st. sw., and Leo V. Trail, son of Morgan L. Trail, 1606 F st. nw.; Pfc. Joseph M. Vendemia, whose parents, Mr. and Mrs. Antonio Vendemia, live at 411 Half st. sw., and Sergt. Frank J. Frericks, whose sister, Miss Lucille Frericks, lives at 1815 17th st. nw.

Corpl. William L. Oliver, the sixth of the group, comes from Leesburg, Va., where his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph L. Oliver, live at 220 E. Market st.

All six enlisted in the Marine Corps Reserve before Pearl Harbor, and were called up to active duty in a body in November, 1940.

In addition to music-making, these marines stand guard watches, take time out to dig fox holes, while Pvt. First Class Vendemia and Corporal Oliver, barber and furniture repairman, respectively, in Washington before the war, practice their arts for the buddies at the front.

Is Pre-War Whiskey Running Out?

ONE HUNDRED PROOF

Even with careful rationing ::: good aged whiskies are getting scarcer. The better whiskies are often hard to find ::.

But an authentic ALL Rye whiskey is almost out of this world!

Not one bottle in a hundred is an ALL Rye (98% rye grain) whiskey! Most are mixtures of rye and other grains.

So go to your B. P. R. dealer ::: remind him of the amount you have bought in the past ::: and ask him to save your share of the B. P. R. apportioned to him.

Do this and you should always be able to get a reasonable share of the B. P. R. that is being reserved for this territory.

WLB Grants 'Escape' Period In Union Maintenance Cases

In ordering union maintenance clauses included in collective bargaining contracts, the War Labor Board planned to freeze the union status of members for the duration of the contract involved, not for the duration of the war, WLB's Shipbuilding Commission ruled yesterday over the protest of labor representatives.

The commission decided, in effect, that it would not order disputed maintenance of membership clauses renewed without giving employes the 15 day "escape" period customarily provided when such clauses are ordered initially.

The question came up for the first time in connection with the dispute between the Federal Shipbuilding & Drydock Co., Kearny, N. J., and the CIO Industrial Union of Marine & Shipbuilding Workers.

Will Renew Clause

The commission announced that it had decided to renew the maintenance of membership clause which was ordered by WLB last year after a bitter controversy during which the United States Steel shipyard was seized and operated by the Government several months, with the same 15-day escape clause provided in the original order.

An automatic checkoff of union dues and a liberalized vacation plan were ordered, with employer members dissenting.

The effect of the combined union maintenance and checkoff orders was to give workers objecting to the checkoff the alternative of withdrawing during the 15 day period, or having their dues checked off for the full contract year.

Commission Chairman William E. Simkin said that he voted for the inclusion of the disputed clause "in spite of his belief the industrial relations in these yards may not be improved and may be made more difficult by providing an 'escape period.'"

"It is conceivable," he continued, "that all employes who voluntarily assume the rights and obligations of membership in this union should be required to remain members at least for the duration of the war if that would strengthen the hand of responsible union leadership. But the fact remains that the maintenance of membership provision clearly provides that it is for the duration of the agreement."

He asserted the belief that more harm would be done by nullifying the conditions under which the maintenance of membership clause was originally granted by the WLB, than could result from any possible loss of union membership as a result of the escape clause.

"Moreover, there is something to be said for the idea that, in the long run the union itself will be in a stronger position if it begins this new agreement with members who are really members in fact."

District Officer, 4 Others Awarded Legion of Merit

Capt. Edmund W. Burrough, 53, of 3144 Connecticut ave. nw., with four other officers who participated in night battles with Japanese destroyers, has been awarded the Legion of Merit by Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox.

Captain Burrough's citation reads that the award was made for "exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding service to the Government of the United States as commanding officer of a warship in action in the Solomon Islands, January 28-29 and again on March 5-6, 1943. Throughout these actions, as well as during the occupation of Russell Island, his unfaltering determination and brilliant leadership contributed in large measure to the successful operations of our forces."

The other officers cited are Rear Admiral Aaron S. Merrill, Mississippi; Rear Admiral Robert B. Carney, California; Capt. Robert P. Briscoe, Mississippi, and Comdr. William D. Brown, Annapolis, Md.

Mrs. Eisenhower Photographed With 'Quiz Kids' Here

"To help the morale" of no less than Gen. "Ike" Eisenhower, the Quiz Kids, who will today close their Washington bond-selling tour, were photographed with Mrs. Eisenhower, whose house guests they were yesterday.

Commenting on the picture, which should already have reached the general according to the Army, Mrs. Eisenhower laughed, "He'll be wondering what I'm up to, surrounded by four strange children."

The "strange children," no strangers to radio audiences, are Margaret Merrick, Dick Williams, Harve Fischman and Gerard Darrow, and they helped sell several millions in war bonds here during the past week.

The youngsters last night entertained at Bethesda Naval Hospital and today are bound for an appearance at the USO Canteen in Richmond, Va.

Before visiting Vice President Wallace on Tuesday, the quartet looked in on the Senate "father draft" session, and Senators Hatch, Lucas and Barclay took time out to pay tribute to the Kids for their participation in the war effort.

Auto Registrations Decrease 17½%, Van Duzer Reports

Wartime travel restrictions have resulted in a 17½ per cent reduction in District automobile registrations, Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer announced last night.

A total of 136,000 net registrations were reported by the Traffic Department since the last tag issuance period. The net registrations do not take into consideration transfers of title and duplicate tags issued. Van Duzer said the decrease in auto registrations was due, in addition to gasoline rationing, to the fact many car owners have either moved from the city or entered the armed forces and failed to renew their license plates.

However, Van Duzer pointed out, the volume of traffic over a 24-hour period has dropped only 29 per cent in the past two years. This was revealed in a recent traffic check. Transients and newcomers to the city account for the slight decrease in overall traffic, he added.

The reduction in general traffic volume is nevertheless offset by an estimated 30 per cent increase in pedestrian traffic, Van Duzer declared.

Expansion Of Tire-Making Plans Sought

William O'Neil, president of the General Tire & Rubber Co., warned yesterday that civilians might not get passenger car tires in 1944, unless the Government authorized "the immediate launching of a huge expansion program" for the tire manufacturing industry.

O'Neil released his statement prior to a meeting of rubber industry leaders with WPB Vice Chairman Charles E. Wilson and Rubber Director Bradley Dewey to discuss manpower problems affecting expansion of the industry's production capacity in Akron, Ohio, and Los Angeles, Calif., the industry's two main centers—both of which are listed as labor shortage areas.

It was understood that the government plans to authorize various units of the rubber industry to expand wherever feasible, but is holding up the plan to adjust it to the manpower supply.

Calls for Faster Rate

O'Neill said the synthetic rubber program would provide "plenty of rubber" next year.

However, he said that tires will have to be built next year at three times the present rate to provide civilians with 30 million tires—the amount used for replacements alone in normal, pre-war years.

He charged that "self-imposed production limits keep the capacity of every machine at the rate of speed of the slowest worker," and added that "work stoppages and absenteeism further reduce the total output."

"The real pinch will begin this winter," O'Neil said.

"To meet requirements for small struck tires for military truck use, airplanes and small civilian trucks, much of the equipment used before the war for passenger car tires has been converted to these other war purposes.

Milling Problems

"Synthetic rubber provides new problems of milling. Thirty per cent more milling machinery now is needed to turn out the same amount of material that was turned out with crude rubber. Moreover, synthetic rubber slows down actual tire building. The rate of production at ordinary passenger car tire machines has been reduced 25 per cent. In many instances, the men are not building any more tires in an eight-hour day than they did in the six-hour day in force in the industry before the war.

"Women have been employed to build small tires and the production per machine is thus further cut down on the machines operated by women. . . .

"Therefore, if the tire industry is to come close to meeting the 1944 quota of 30 million tires, we must have additional machinery, both for milling and tire building; we must have expanded facilities, and we must not only utilize all available manpower by transfer of war jobs other than tire building to other cities, but we must also take part of the tire building to communities where a labor supply may be had."

Loosen Asthma Mucus Sleep Fine

Say Thousands of Sufferers

Choking, gasping, wheezing, recurring attacks of bronchial asthma turn your sleep and rest period hours of misery, retard oxygen because you can't get air in and out of your lungs properly. But now it is no longer necessary to suffer from these terrible attacks without the benefit you may receive from a physician's prescription called Mendaco. A WAR MESSAGE FROM THE AUTHOR OF

"SO LITTLE TIME"

SOME months after the above book was written Jeffrey Wilson's financial adviser, Milton Cooke, paid one of his periodic calls for the purpose of helping Jeffrey straighten out his affairs. It was difficult for Jeffrey to listen to him intelligently because he could never understand much about common stocks and bonds. He was only aware that when he personally invested in a security it usually diminished in value.

"You simply remember," Milton Cooke said, "the investments we've had bad luck with. Everyone makes mistakes."

"I want something I can put my money in," Jeffrey said, "which won't be a mistake."

Mr. Cooke took off his spectacles and polished the lenses carefully.

"With the world the way it is," he said, "and with the heavy burden of taxation, an investment counselor has a very real problem. Right now, in your situation, it might be well to consider the possibility of inflation. There are certain commonly recognized investments which are hedges against inflation."

"There's only one hedge I know of," Jeffrey said, "only one that has any chance of working."

Milton Cooke smiled.

"Jeffrey," he said, "why don't you let me do the worrying?"

"It's not a question of worrying," Jeffrey answered, "it's a question of simple common sense. You say there may be inflation in this country, and in time of war particularly there is always danger of inflation. Well, there's only one way to stop it. Every citizen should put every possible dollar he has left after taxes into War Bonds and Stamps. It isn't a matter of patriotism as much as a matter of common insurance for the future. If government finances aren't sound at a time like this, nothing will be sound; and it's up to every citizen, no matter who he is, no matter what his job may be, to support his government, if only out of self-interest. It isn't how many bonds you buy as much as lending the United States what spare cash you have, instead of competing by spending it on consumer goods that you don't really need. It's the soundest investment you can make. Financially War Bonds pay good dividends, and will be redeemed at par. They are as strong as our country and it's up to all of us to keep our country strong. If I have any cash, you needn't worry about any other investments while the war is going on. There isn't any other advice that's necessary. If we all hang together and do this, the dollar will be worth about what it is when this war is over—but if we don't hang together, we'll all hang separately and that goes for everyone, no matter how rich or how poor."

BACK THE ATTACK WITH WAR BONDS

There was nothing remarkable about the guy back before Pearl Harbor. Just an ordinary all-right guy. If he had a couple of extra bucks in his pocket, he'd just as soon give it to you as spend it on himself. He's like that.

The last time we heard from him he was expecting to move up to the front lines any minute. He's probably there now . . . still giving more than he receives. He doesn't ask much of us . . . just enough of the weapons needed to win this war. He's going to get them, too. Sam, and millions of other guys like him, are going to get planes, tanks, guns, ships . . . everything they need to wipe out the enemy that dared to threaten our freedom.

Not So Good

Returns through Monday show that Washington had raised about 59 per cent of its 94-million-dollar quota for the Third War Loan drive. That is not so good compared with the New York City record of 87 per cent, while the local response of small investors who generally buy Series E bonds is extremely disappointing. Only $4,700,000 of this issue has been sold, according to last reports, and it is those bonds which measure the sacrifices that the people, as distinct from a few large individual investors and institutions, are prepared to make.

True, the funds contributed by savings banks and insurance companies are the savings of the people, but in this bond drive the Government wants and needs a good deal more than that. People have more money in their pockets and in bank deposits than ever before in our history. Recent estimates of the SEC indicate that during the first six months of this year currency and bank deposits belonging to individuals increased by $6,900,000,000. That total, be it noted, does not include savings used to buy Government bonds but savings after purchases of bonds.

Without knowing what proportion of the surplus cash resulting for war spending is lodged in Washington, it is safe to say that the residents of this city have received their share of the increase and that it is many times the $4,700,000 so far invested in E Bonds. Should the drive fail because of the indifferent support of small investors, it will not be because Washington could not reach the goal set for it, but because it did not try hard enough.

MacArthur's Statement

There is a somewhat excessive nobility and self-abnegation in the curious statement made on Tuesday by Gen. Douglas MacArthur. He will be, he said, "perfectly content in such role as may be prescribed for me." What soldier would not be? The clear implication of this remark is that General MacArthur feels he is being relegated to a subordinate position in the Far Eastern conflict. It is true that Lord Louis Mountbatten was recently appointed to an independent command over the southeast Asia theater equal to MacArthur's in the southwest Pacific. Admiral Chester Nimitz has held just such a command in the Pacific for many months. The war against Japan, like the war against Germany, is a war on a very grand scale, exceedingly vast in its geographic scope. There may well be room in it for the activities and ambitions of more than a single commander.

General MacArthur's statement implied also that he is being thwarted in his strategic conception for the Pacific theater, which he declared to be "the very opposite of what is termed island-hopping." He prefers, he said, "massive strokes against only main strategic objectives." But this is scarcely an original view. As long ago as last February, President Roosevelt observed in a broadcast to the Nation: "We do not expect to spend the time it would take to bring Japan to final defeat merely by inching our way forward from island to island across the vast expanse of the Pacific. Great and decisive actions against the Japanese will be taken to drive the invader from the soil of China. Important actions will be taken in the skies over China—and over Japan itself. . . . There are many roads which lead right to Tokyo. We shall neglect none of them."

Some of the President's promises have already been realized. Some are plainly in preparation. The designation of Lord Louis Mountbatten to command the southeast Asia theater is the most encouraging indication that the Allied High Command means to strike directly at the heart of Japanese strength. The extension of our Pacific naval power as a result of victory in the Mediterranean is another hopeful augury that we will soon undertake a powerful offensive against the Oriental end of the Axis. The several combat areas of the Far East—and of Europe as well—are by no means unrelated. Each plays its essential part in the planetary strategy which must govern the United Nations forces.

General MacArthur's statement appears to have been flailing at straw men. To say this is not to disparage in any way the brilliance of his achievements in forestalling a Japanese thrust at Australia and in wresting vital outposts from the enemy in the southwest Pacific. He has done much; and there is still much of the very highest importance for him to do. If he will continue as he has so effectively commenced in his own area of command, he need not worry about being subordinated or about having his strategy discarded. These are not, in any case, proper worries for a great soldier to express in public.

Renegotiation Reform

The old saying that where there's so much smoke there must be some fire seems especially applicable to the heated controversy over renegotiation of war contracts. Charges that renegotiation deprives war industries of the extra profits resulting from efficiency in operation and keeps contractors in a state of perpetual and demoralizing uncertainty as to the facts about profit and loss have come from too many quarters to be summarily dismissed as prejudiced testimony. On the other hand, evidence that some war contractors have profited excessively from doing business with the Government strongly supports the claim that renegotiation of contracts is a necessary safeguard against profiteers.

Those who favor outright abandonment of renegotiation argue that profiteering is discouraged effectively by heavy taxation of excess profits. Opponents of renegotiation frequently contend, too, that the Government would in the long run gain more from taxation of profits after contracts than it obtains by recapture of profits before taxation. In our opinion undue stress has been laid upon the importance of the monetary gains resulting from renegotiation. The sums recaptured by the Government from industry have been substantial, but the purpose of the renegotiation procedure, after all, is to insure reasonable price bases not only for contracts that are being reexamined but for future contracts.

Senator Hatch, a member of the Truman Committee, told the Senate this week that the Government is still buying many new and unfamiliar articles and still coping with the problems presented by rapidly fluctuating production volumes. Under such conditions it is often impossible for either procurement agencies or contractors to know what constitutes a fair price for a particular job. Given peacetime competition, the question would be determined by market bids and offers. But we are in the midst of war, with the usual competitive tests lacking. In the absence of renegotiation, opportunities would, therefore, abound for unscrupulous war contractors to conceal exorbitant profits by paying excessively high wages and salaries, lavishing funds on advertising and in other ways cheating the tax collector.

The problem, then, is how to retain the benefits of the renegotiation procedure without at the same time harassing war contractors and depriving them of incentive to improve upon existing processes by taking away all the rewards of efficiency. That is the task essayed by Senator Hatch who has outlined a tentative program for submission to the Committee on Finance. His plan appears to be a sane and sensible compromise. It is designed primarily to reform the organization set up to administer the Renegotiation Act. Undoubtedly the hostility of industry is to a very large extent directed against the way in which the Renegotiation Act has been administered, rather than against the principle behind the law. Senator Hatch points out, for instance, that numerous independent price-adjustment boards are attached to six different departments of the Government, and all these departments attempt to handle renegotiations with all types of war contractors. His bill calls, therefore, for a central coordinating authority to supervise administration of the law for all departments and to serve as an impartial board of appeals. A simple formula is also suggested to provide automatically for exemption from renegotiation of contractors whose profits do not exceed a certain percentage of total sales.

Coupled with this proposal is another bill sponsored by Senator Hatch allowing war contractors to set aside 20 per cent of their profits after renegotiation to build up postwar reserves, the funds to be invested in non-negotiable non-interest bearing Government securities. Although Senator Hatch agrees that more liberal provision for the postwar period is essential, he rightly concludes that relief should be provided through changes in the tax laws in accordance with specific instructions, not by decisions of officials in charge of contract renegotiation. He has good reason to believe that the suggested amendments would greatly improve the existing renegotiation law. But he couples his opinion with a warning that "as with all other laws, interpretation and administration will spell success or defeat of congressional intent and purpose."

Furor Teutonicus

The behavior of the Nazi garrisons in Italy toward the population of that unhappy country seems to be reaching a point of frenzy and cruelty equal to or surpassing the worst barbarities in Poland, Flanders, Czechoslovakia and White Russia. The tempo of terror is accelerated in the regions which the Nazis are preparing to evacuate. Refugees from Naples passing into the Allied lines tell how thousands of civilians are being massacred and how the city itself—comparable in size to Cleveland or Baltimore—is being systematically looted and destroyed. Epidemic disease is rife. In view of the German record since the conquest of Poland there is no special reason to doubt these tales or even to suspect hysterical exaggerations of the truth.

And yet it is difficult to see any logic in this latest terror; or any motive in it beyond that of an insensate revenge for the Italian defection. The machine gunning of refugees on the highways of Belgium and Flanders, inhuman as it was, did at least serve a military purpose in disrupting communications and impeding the Allied retreat. But in the present case the terror is not likely to impede the Allied advance, and even the looting seems wholly wanton, since it would be folly for a rearguard army, whose communications are threatened, to encumber itself with many spoils. And not unless Marshal Kesselring is assured that the present British-American operations in Italy represent the main thrust of the Allied campaign for Berlin would there be much purpose in applying a strategy of scorched earth.

What makes it appear that this latest exhibition of furor teutonicus is the frenzy of desperation are actions of Marshal Kesselring in Rome. The latest report is that some of the Roman cardinals have been placed under arrest, while the Berlin radio denounces the Vatican for its "pacificism" and "anti-Germanism," an indirect way, no doubt, of accusing it of complicity in the Italian surrender. At last it would seem that the long-submerged conflict between Hitler and the Catholic Church, first within Germany and then throughout all Europe and the world, is coming into the open. In a test of endurance between these two forces there is scarcely any doubt as to the outcome. For Hitler to have chosen such a moment as this to offer an outright challenge to so powerful an adversary is a sufficient index of his desperation.

Third Front

Prime Minister Churchill has ended all arguments as to whether the Allied campaign in Italy constitutes a "second front" by boldly admitting that it does not. "I call this front, which we opened first in Africa, next in Sicily and now in Italy," Mr. Churchill said, "the third front. A second front, which already exists potentially and which is rapidly gathering weight, has not yet been engaged."

When that second front is going to be opened up and where, the British Prime Minister did not, of course, reveal. But there will be very widespread approval of his remark that the Allies "will not be forced or cajoled into undertaking vast operations against our better judgment in order to gain political unanimity or a cheer from any quarter." This is sound strategy and wise statesmanship.

In the meantime, however, very real progress is being made on the "third front." The bridgehead at Salerno is being widened to the point where it is no longer a bridgehead at all. Sardinia has fallen into Allied hands without the Allies having to strike a single blow, the Italian divisions on the island having done the job for us by defeating the German forces there. And now a French military force, aided by Italians loyal to Marshal Badoglio, is successfully engaged in adding Corsica to the list of Allied footholds in the Mediterranean. Already the western half of the French island has been cleared of Germans. Soon all of it will be available to Allied land, sea and air power and we shall have acquired a base from which the war can be effectively carried to the Germans in the Po Valley and in southern France. This will be no inconsiderable extra dividend of the Italian surrender.

As Mr. Churchill pointed out in his speech on Tuesday, the Allies had great and elaborate plans worked out for Sardinia and Corsica. Fortunately, these plans could be dispensed with. We "have got them broadly as a result of sound blows at the center and vital points of the enemy," he said. Pressed by the Allied forces advancing from the south, the Germans in Italy will also be increasingly harassed by Allied air power based on the Mediterranean islands as well as North Africa and further plagued by the aroused Italian people who, after their first stunned reaction to defeat, are more and more taking up arms against the nation which is now their hated enemy, as it is ours.

RETURN

I must be happy when I come again
To this loved region. Time must not destroy
The memory of that lost glory when I was a boy.

A lightheart boy with will to match the wind
And eyes to see the Spring, but not to see
The woods by Winter's icy fingers thinned—
So must I be.

I must be happy when I come again,
And, conning through the years' long alphabet,
There will be places, happenings and men
I must forget.

I must forget—forget the lash, the scars,
Ingratitudes and scorns and hurts and ills.
Then, steadfast as the magnets of the stars,
I'll face my hills.

I must be happy when I come again.
When I shall stand—just here—at evening's fall,
There will be places, happenings and men
I must recall.

America At War

Women After the War

WHEN THIS war is ended and the servicemen come marching home, there may be a battle royal between women and veterans for jobs.

The Department of Labor estimate that 12 million persons may be thrown out of work during the demobilization period seems conservative to those who have studied the situation. There will be keen competition for the jobs that remain.

Under the Selective Service Act, veterans are guaranteed their old jobs back. But many a firm has gone out of existence since hostilities began, and thousands of boys were drafted or enlisted straight from school, so that they didn't leave a regular job. There will be a lot of slack to take up.

Meanwhile, employment of women has expanded rapidly. When the history of this war is written, in fact, women will get a lot of credit for keeping the wheels of industry turning at home while the greatest army in our history was being trained and sent into the field.

A year ago one factory worker in six was a woman; now the figure is nearly one in three. Last May women constituted 33 per cent of all workers in the aircraft industry, 38 per cent in electrical equipment factories, 43 per cent in scientific instruments, and 46 per cent in small arms and ammunition. Even the shipyards have tripled the number of women employed in the last years; today one shipyard worker in ten is a woman.

More Women Needed

And still more women are needed. In July there were nearly 15 million women in nonagricultural work; and a million more will be at work, if all goes well, by the end of this year. Before the war is over we may need 18 million women in war work alone.

Millions of women are working in war industry largely for patriotic reasons. After the war is over, many of these will be willing and even glad to go back to their homes. But a majority will prefer staying at work, keeping the new independence they have earned. A Gallup Poll of women warworkers has shown that 56 per cent definitely planned to continue working after the war, and another 13 per cent were undecided. Of the married women, 35 per cent wanted to keep on working.

Some firms, like Jack & Heintz of Cleveland, have made it clear in hiring women workers to replace drafted men that such jobs were to be terminated when the servicemen returned. But many of these women will seek other jobs.

And there is where the rub will come. For returning soldiers will demand the jobs which they have been told will be waiting for them. No one can dispute the justice of such demands. But in that situation, resentment of women workers is bound to grow.

One poll made by the Office of Public Opinion Research showed that more than nine-tenths of the people thought women now working should be made to give up their jobs to returning veterans.

Temporary Unemployment

The danger is that in a period of temporary unemployment, blanket legislation will be passed to fire women workers—or perhaps married women workers—to make way for veterans. This would be especially unfair to women who need their jobs, or who have particular talents that cannot easily be replaced.

Firing married women was tried by the Federal Government and many private companies during the depression as a means of spreading jobs. But it didn't solve the problem. Furthermore, the great majority of women work because they must—and that will be more true than ever after this war, because of the heavy casualties our fighting men will suffer.

After the last war, women took a terrific setback in the economic world. But in World War I only 20 per cent of industrial workers were women; today the figure is 33 per cent or more. Women are much more firmly entrenched than before.

Moreover, women now have the vote. And they have made great progress toward the goal of equal pay for equal work since the last war. Hence there is less chance that employers will try to retain women workers in preference to men in order to keep wage costs down.

But this will not lessen the danger of a veterans' drive against working women. Such a campaign would divert attention from the larger problem of full employment for all after the war. And that is the only real solution.

If we can achieve full employment in wartime, we can do it in peacetime too—and for a small fraction of the hundred billion a year we are spending for war purposes.

Secretary of Defense

Your editorials re "Air Strategy" are pointing the way correctly. The ultimate solution should be, after World War II is won, to have a Cabinet officer as Secretary of Defense with three undersecretaries, (1) land, (2) sea, (3) air. BILL.

A Seed Is Planted

By Barnet Nover

Fulbright Resolution Approved

IN APPROVING the Fulbright resolution by the thumping majority of 360 to 29, the House of Representatives has made the most significant congressional move in the field of American foreign relations since the Senate, in 1920, refused its consent to American membership in the League of Nations.

The latter development proved a strait jacket that tied the hands and feet of the United States during the 20 years of armistice that separated World War I from World War II.

During that period our foreign policy was almost entirely negative and self-defeating. Having refused to join forces with the other nations of the world in a program that looked toward the putting down of aggression wherever it might raise its head, we ultimately became the victims of the drift to war that had set in soon after the guns had been stilled on the Western Front.

THE FULBRIGHT resolution looks in the other direction. It is positive rather than negative in its approach. It aims away from isolation rather than toward it. It constitutes a recognition of the dour realities of the world we live in rather than an attempt to escape to the happy irresponsibility of a vanished era.

But, and its sponsor, Mr. Fulbright, has been the first to admit it, the resolution which the House has just approved, is not an end but a beginning. It is a seed which, having been planted, can if given proper nurture produce bright fruit. But the seed may also rot and the shoots it may give forth may wither through lack of sunshine or be destroyed by insects.

THE POINT which must not be lost to sight is that during the last war the percentage of Americans who favored some such a policy as that expounded in the Fulbright resolution was not much smaller than it is today. Yet the net result was negative.

At no time were the out-and-out isolationists in the Senate very numerous. The Senate's Battalion of Death which fought every attempt to make the United States a working member of the postwar order in 1919 never consisted of more than 15 men. They alone could not have prevented this Nation from becoming a member of the League. They needed and they secured allies—men who while favoring international collaboration for peace in principle didn't like it in practice, men who found flaws in the League Covenant, men who saw in its provisions all sorts of difficulties and dangers.

THE FULBRIGHT resolution provides:

"That the Congress hereby expresses itself as favoring the creation of appropriate international machinery with power adequate to establish and to maintain a just and lasting peace among the nations of the world, and as favoring participation by the United States therein through its constitutional processes."

This is a very clear statement of principle. It has the advantage of simplicity, brevity and clarity. But it is inevitably so broad as to allow for a very wide latitude in its ultimate interpretation. The debate, in fact, showed that some of those who voted for it did so with their tongues in their cheeks or with spoken or unspoken reservations as to how the resolution is actually to be implemented.

Certainly there will be those who, should the Administration seek to carry out the implications of the Fulbright resolution will say: "Yes, we were for that resolution but this specific program is a violation, not a fulfillment of its terms."

THEY will discover that, so far as they are concerned, the machinery of peace that is ultimately set up is not "appropriate" or that the peace itself is not "just and lasting" or that the participation of the United States involves a violation of "constitutional processes."

One may recall, in this connection, the stand taken by Senator Philander Knox in 1918 and 1919.

Knox, a former Attorney General and a former Secretary of State, was one of the most vigorous opponents of our participation in the League.

Yet on December 12, 1918, he made a speech in the Senate in which he expounded what he called "the new American doctrine," namely, that if a situation should arise "in which any power or combination of powers should, directly or indirectly, menace the freedom and peace of Europe, the United States would regard such a situation with grave concern as a menace to its own freedom and would consult with the other powers with a view to concerted action."

This was the heart of the League Covenant in another form. But when the Covenant was rejected Knox's "new American doctrine" was not substituted for it. Instead we got a vacuum.

The Fulbright resolution is a step forward, a small step but an important step in the direction the United States has no choice but to follow if we are to avoid another world war. But the value of the resolution will depend on what is done about it. The skeleton of our postwar policy still has to acquire flesh and blood.

Remember The Greeks

In the midst of our well-earned jubilation over the unconditional surrender of Italy, it is fitting and very appropriate that we should remember that brave and heroic nation of Greece, which first dared to resist and first administered defeat to the Fascists in the Province of Northern Epirus and thereby rekindled the faith and hope of the submerged democracies in the ultimate triumph of the forces of freedom.

General Eisenhower, I hope, will also remember the Greeks and will give them the proper recognition when the hour will strike for the United Nations' armies to enter Albania, by placing at the head of the forces that will advance into the Greek Province of Northern Epirus (dubbed "Southern Albania" by the Italian imperialists for Italian convenience) the fighting Greek battalions under his command. For the soil of Northern Epirus fondles the still tepid blood of 100,000 heroic Greek soldiers, dead in the fields and on the mountains of that province. And the bones of those 100,000 Greek dead will then rest forever in peace at the thud of marching Greek fighters reentering the land hallowed by superhuman Greek sacrifices around the cities of Corytsa, Argyrocastro, Premeti and Himarra, that have already taken their place in history alongside Thermopylae, Marathon and Platia.

The Greeks have indeed earned such a recognition. For, when Britain was passing through the darkest night of uncertainty and peril, the Greeks alone became her ally, not to defend a Greek empire, not to defend riches and wealth, of which Greece has never been possessed, but merely for principle—for freedom and democracy!

It is, therefore, fitting that we should remember the Greeks on this occasion, both for the first United Nations' victory which they won against the Axis and for the indomitable and irrepressible resistance since 1940 at the cost of hundreds of thousands of men, women and children dying from hunger and pestilences, their dying lips uttering the historic last words of Leonidas at Thermopylae: "O passer-by, tell the Lacedaemonians that Leonidas and his 300 lie here buried, obedient to their command!"

The eyes of the subjugated democracies of Europe are now set upon General Eisenhower. They will be much encouraged, and their faith in their own ultimate restoration will be considerably strengthened by the opportune gesture of gallantry to the Greeks by General Eisenhower. Indeed, Britain, Russia and America owe Greece an unredeemable obligation, and General Eisenhower can, on the eve of the invasion of Albania, give expression to the deep sentiments of friendship of the American people for the heroes of Greece.

Subsidize Dairymen

As a member of an organization vitally concerned with the economic problems of our country, I would like to state our position in connection with the question of the request of the Maryland-Virginia milk producers for an increase of 1.6 cent per quart for milk.

The high cost of living in the District is well known. To increase the price of milk is to deny this vital food to thousands of children and to thousands of low-income warworkers. The cost of living for all would go up still further. It is in the interest of the farmer as well as the city worker that everything be done to stabilize our economy, and this cannot be done if increases in this or that item are allowed.

At the same time we cannot ignore the problems of the farmer. But placing the question of farmer against the city dweller (as "Virginia Dairyman" did in his letter which appeared in The Post of September 16) is unfair and helps neither group. We feel that the milk farmer needs help from the Government in the problems of food, manpower, processing and distribution. The working farmer needs help in planning. Such help would reduce his costs. However, if the Department of Agriculture has exhausted the help it can give in these directions, and if it determines after close study that an increase in the price is essential to the interest of the working farmer, such an increase should be met through the use of Government subsidies and not passed on to the already overburdened consumer.

Transit Service

We are in accord with the suggestions contained in Mr. J. A. Brunsick's letter published in The Post on September 12, that the public would be better served if more fully advised in regard to several points raised by him:

(1) The suggestion that cars should be marked plainly to indicate those on which fares must be paid at the rear door: All of the rear entrance cars are green, and as rapidly as we can do so, we are now putting the words, "Rear Entrance" in a prominent position on the front dash. The front entrance cars are blue and they carry the sign on the dash, "Front Entrance."

(2) All of our front entrance cars carry the words "In" and "Out" on the risers of the front steps, indicating which side of the door is for entrance and which is for exit. Some confusion has arisen from the efforts of our operators to expedite service at heavy loading points by advising patrons to enter by both doors. This naturally resulted in some of our patrons assuming that they could enter the exit position at all times. It was, therefore, necessary to clear up the difficulty by returning to the established rule that entrance should be solely through the No. 1 door, and exit through the No. 2 door, marked respectively, "In" and "Out."

(3) We believe that most patrons do leave their seats in time to alight promptly when the car reaches their stops. However, some elderly and infirm patrons can not move about while the car is in motion and this necessarily results in some delay and sometimes in their being taken past their destination because the operators proceed in the belief that all desiring to do so have alighted.

The riding public's spirit of patriotic cooperation has enabled us to provide them with the best service possible under wartime conditions and it is letters like those of Mr. Brunsick's, containing constructive suggestions that help us to do a better job of transporting wartime Washington to and from work.

The Once Over

After the Rescue

Hitler—Well, well, well! Here you are, safe and sound, just as if nothing had happened to you.

Mussolini—The last part of that sentence is wholly inaccurate.

Hitler—Pull yourself together! You're all upset.

Mussolini—If you had been through what I've been through you would be upset.

Hitler—Relax and cheer up. You are now in German hands.

Mussolini (still bewildered)—Is that good?

Hitler—Of course it's good. If it hadn't been for me the Americans and British would have you. Fancy that.

Mussolini—What troubles me is whether I should fancy this more than to fancy that. Say, am I dreaming or has all this happened to me in fact? Stick a pin into me and see if I'm awake.

Hitler—What I am going to stick into you will not be a pin! What do you mean by letting yourself be overthrown! I'm surprised!

Mussolini—If you're surprised you can imagine my emotions.

Hitler—You shouldn't have let it happen. Didn't you stop to think how your overthrow would humiliate me?

Mussolini—I couldn't help it. It happened so fast.

Hitler—I can't believe it possible that a powerful leader of a great state can be in one day and out the next.

Mussolini—You will!

Hitler—Why didn't you resist? When they came to toss you out why didn't you tell them they couldn't do a thing like that to me?

Mussolini—There you go getting your pronouns all mixed up again.

Hitler—Well, after all, I suppose we shouldn't cry over spilt milk.

Mussolini—If you think all that was spilt was milk you are crazy.

Hitler—Cheer up. I intend to put you back as ruler of Italy. Do you believe that?

Mussolini—Yes.

Hitler—That shows we're both crazy.

Mussolini—Well, it's good to be free. I can get a nice long rest here with you. I'm feeling all in.

Hitler—The thing to remember is that you are all out! I've got to show the world that nobody can treat you like this. An insult to a partner is an insult to me. I don't recall anything in my life that has hurt me so much. I bleed for you.

Mussolini—I don't see any blood, but it's a nice offer, just the same, and I appreciate it. Now, what's the setup?

Hitler—I'm going to make you dictator in northern Italy. All true Fascists will rally around you.

Mussolini—Bravo!

Hitler—They will flock to your banner. You will address with a typical old-time battle cry.

Mussolini (eagerly)—Balcony and everything?

Hitler—Yes. You will issue a proclamation to your people.

Mussolini—Goody! Goody!

Hitler—You will lead in full uniform!

Mussolini—Splendid.

Hitler—You will lead all loyal Italians into battle.

Mussolini—I knew there would be a catch in it!

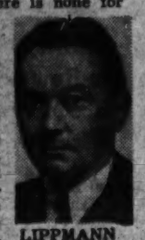
Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

General Marshall

THERE IS ground for honest difference of judgment about the best use to make of General Marshall but there is none for the charge that he is the victim of a conspiracy to demote him, remove him, or kick him upstairs. Even if we choose to disregard what is known to all who know anything about the conduct of the war, that General Marshall is trusted and admired on both sides of the Atlantic, even if we disregard the authoritative fact that the suggestion of his command came first from American and not from British sources, and has still to be approved in London, even then the charge is inherently absurd. For the charge is that Mr. Churchill is proposing to get rid of General Marshall by placing him in command from England of the decisive military operation of the war.



LIPPMANN

Of this operation the Prime Minister said on Tuesday that it would be "the bloodiest portion—make no mistake about that—the bloodiest portion of this war for Great Britain and the United States." How can anyone imagine that the British would wish to invest General Marshall with the direct responsibility for such a campaign if they wished to get rid of him? Did anyone ever before hear of a plot to remove a general by giving him the supreme command in the decisive battle?

THE EXACT question of General Marshall's role in the next phase of the war cannot be discussed fully in public because it must obviously be related to the strategical plans which are a military secret. But certain fundamentals of the question are known. Foremost among them we must note that, while General Marshall has been talked about for the supreme command ever since we entered the war, the question did not become real until after the Quebec Conference.

WHY AFTER Quebec? Because our victories in the Mediterranean and the great Russian offensive had brought us last month to a phase of the war where it was possible and necessary to make the conclusive strategical plans for the defeat of Germany and for the main campaign against Japan. These plans were made at Quebec. Once the strategical commitments had been made, it was then an open question whether the Chief of Staff in Washington would not become subsidiary to the generalissimo in the field.

In the defensive and preparatory phase of the war it was obvious that the great decisions had to be taken in Washington. These decisions dealt with the organizing and training of the Army, the allocation of inadequate equipment, the development of the various theaters, and the global strategy of the war. But these questions have in the main been settled, and now it is most likely that the great decisions will be those of the commanders who execute the plans which have been made. When the commanders are engaged in offensive battle, will they not be telling the chiefs of staff in Washington and in London what they want, rather than be taking orders from them? Can the fighting, as distinguished from the preparatory phase, of the war be directed by remote control from Washington?

THE OBJECTION to letting General Marshall command the armies he has created is that it deprives the President and Congress of his capacity to advise them by his daily presence. This is undoubtedly an objection. It arises, however, not from a conspiracy but from the fact that no man can be in two places at once.

The problem is in its essentials similar to that which Jefferson Davis failed to solve in the case of General Lee, which Lincoln did solve when at last he found General Grant.

LEE WAS the greatest soldier of the Confederacy. He was needed in Richmond to show Davis how to devise the strategy of a unified war on the several fronts in northern Virginia, the Mississipi and the Carolinas. Lee was also the best leader of the army of Northern Virginia. Davis tried to solve the problem by giving him the command of all troops in Virginia and the Carolinas, while leaving him in executive command in Northern Virginia. Lee refused saying "I cannot operate in this manner," and because Davis failed to make him generalissimo, the Confederacy did not develop a unified strategy.

Lincoln, on the other hand, after many disappointments and failures with McClellan and others, found in Grant a soldier to whom he was willing to entrust the command of the Union armies on all the fronts. Grant's strategy being settled, and his command assured, the war was then conducted by Grant from his military headquarters and not from Washington. Few remember that Halleck was chief of staff.

GENERAL MARSHALL has been in Washington as General Lee should have been at Richmond, while the fundamental decisions were being made. The question is whether now that they have been made, his role ought not to be that of General Grant after 1864.

Certainly we cannot accept the view that the role played by Washington and by Grant, by Napoleon and by Foch, is a demotion. We may say also, I believe, that it has been had enough to drag the name of one eminent American general into partisan and factional politics during this war, and that any attempt to drag General Marshall's name into politics also will be strongly resented and resolutely resisted.

Postwar Plan Faces Delay

Senate Talk Feared

By Mary Spargo
Post Staff Writer

Fear that "certain members" may launch violent attacks upon policies of some of this nation's allies may considerably delay submission of any post-war resolutions to the Senate, authoritative sources revealed yesterday after an executive session of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Officially the committee did not have before it the Fulbright resolution which passed the House Tuesday with a roll call vote of 360 to 29, and which would put Congress on record as "favoring the creation of appropriate international machinery with power adequate to establish and maintain a just and lasting peace among the nations of the world." The resolution will reach the Senate Friday and then will be referred to the Foreign Relations Committee.

Unofficially, however, even those members who have openly favored creation of such international machinery were concerned at the heat that was put on by the House action, taken to reflect clearly the wishes of the public.

Senator George (Democrat) of Georgia, ranking Democrati member of the committee, pointed out that under Senate rules it is practically impossible to limit debate. He called attention to the difference in Senate rules from those of the House, where the Fulbright resolution was brought up under a procedure forbidding amendments, and limiting debate to four hours.

Other sources said frankly, "We know perfectly well that there are members of the Senate who apparently, even in the middle of the war, would like to talk for days on the subject of Great Britain's policies in India, and the attitude of Russia toward Poland.

"Such discussions in the middle of the war might well impede the whole war effort. They might have international repercussions. Foreign sources cannot evaluate discussions here as we do. They don't discount sufficiently attacks upon their policies when such attacks are launched by a member of the Senate."

Chairman Connally (Democrat) of Texas said the Foreign Relations subcommittee on postwar matters would meet today in executive session.

"We are not going to be stampeded into bringing out a resolution," he asserted.

Earlier after Congress came back from recess Connally had said he would probably bring out a resolution expressing the sentiments of his committee, but added there was no hurry about it. He said he was personally in favor of the use of economic, and, if necessary, military sanctions against aggressor nations, and maintenance of a certain quota of arms by members of the international alliance for peace.

Despite Senatorial misgivings, Secretary of State Hull yesterday applauded passage of the Fulbright resolution. The Secretary interpreted action of the House as a reflection of the will of the people of the United States. He praised the "high plane" and nonpartisan spirit of the House debate.

Fulbright's resolution was not acceptable to Senators Ball, Burton, Hill and Hatch, proponents of a much more specific resolution favoring creation of an international police force.

It has been evident for some time, however, that if the Fulbright resolution is doomed because of the Senate's jealousy of its treaty-making prerogatives, the so-called B2H2 formula calling for an international police force is also slated for a pigeonhole in the Foreign Relations desk.

U. S. Foreign Policy

Shield Of The Republic

By WALTER LIPPMANN

Russia And The United States

The story of Russian-American relations is a demonstration of how unimportant in the determination of policy is ideology, how compelling is national interest. In a classic paper on this subject, Mr. DeWitt Clinton Poole has shown that Americans have never in all their history liked "the governments which the Russians have permitted to rule over them." They have disliked the Czarist autocracy and the Soviet dictatorship. The Czars returned the compliment by regarding the American democracy as a bad revolutionary example, and in fact Russia was the last of the great powers to grant diplomatic recognition to the United States.

Today we are the conservative state. The Soviets have regarded America as a capitalist, imperialist state and therefore antagonistic to their social order. Except for the few months between the fall of the Czars in March, 1917, and the Bolshevik revolution in November, 1917, the political ideologies of the two nations have been poles apart.

Nevertheless, though these profound differences of ideology have always meant that their diplomatic intercourse was exceedingly difficult, Russia and the United States have usually, each in its own interest, supported one another in the critical moments of their history.

The enduring element in Russian-American relations is that in critical times each nation has always been "for the other a potential friend in the rear of potential enemies." In the War of Independence the Continental Congress sought the assistance of Russia, and Russia practiced, entirely in her own interest, an armed neutrality which favored the colonies. In 1863, at the darkest moment of the Civil War, there occurred the Polish insurrection against Russia. Both Britain and France were considering giving support to the Confederacy in America and to the Polish rebellion. In spite of American ideological sympathy with the Polish national rebellion, Lincoln and Seward refused to intervene diplomatically against Russia. In spite of Russian antipathy to the American democracy, the Czar's government stated, in the official journal of the Foreign Office, that the preservation of the United States was an imperative necessity for Russia, and backed up this declaration by dispatching a squadron of warships from its Baltic fleet to New York and from the Pacific squadron to San Francisco. This gesture had its effect in London and in Paris, warning them not to recognize the Confederacy or to support the Polish insurrection. "I do not do what I did for love of the United States," said Czar Alexander, "but for Russia."

In the first World War antipathy to Czarist Russia was the chief sentimental objection to the ideological claims of the Triple Entente, and, later, American antipathy to the Bolshevick revolutionary terror was intense. Nevertheless, the American policy was firmly opposed to the dismemberment of Russia, and the Bolshevik leaders knew it and counted upon it. Thus in May, 1918, Lenin addressed the Central Executive Committee at Moscow, saying that "an inevitable conflict will arise between Japan and America for the supremacy of the Pacific and its coasts. The conflicting interests of the two imperialistic countries, now screened by an alliance against Germany, check the movement of Japanese imperialism against Russia." Lenin's prediction was correct.

Historic experience shows, then, that Russia and the United States have always been antagonistic in their political ideology, always suspicious that close contact would be subversive. Yet each has always opposed the dismemberment of the other. Each has always wished the other to be strong. They have never had a collision which made them enemies. Each has regarded the other as a potential friend in the rear of its potential enemies.

May this historic relationship be expected to continue after the destruction of the military power of Germany and Japan? The answer must be, whatever the future may bring, that we are at a decisive turning point in our relations with Russia.

It is the assumption now that this war will mean the conclusive defeat of both Germany and Japan; that Germany will never again be able to make a bid for the mastery of Europe and of the transatlantic region of American security; that Japan will never again be able to seek to make an empire over China and the Indies.

In this sense it is a reasonable expectation that Germany and Japan are in the last phase of their last attempt at world empire. For now Germany's war potential is in decline relatively to that of industrialized Russia and of America plus Britain. The same expectation holds for Japan in that the postwar world is likely to see China industrialized, Russia in Siberia become immensely stronger, and the United States conscious of its military-potential. This does not mean that Germany and Japan will disappear from the scales of world power. But it does mean that they may never again be great powers of the first magnitude.

If this assumption is correct, then Russian-American relations will no longer be controlled by the historic fact that each is for the other a potential friend in the rear of its potential enemies. Russia will, on the contrary, be the greatest power in the rear of our indispensible friends—the British Scandinavian, Dutch, Belgian and Latin members of the Atlantic community. In Asia, Russia will be our nearest neighbor across the northern Pacific and by air over the Polar regions; Russia will be the nearest neighbor of China.

Thus the question in Europe is whether Russia will seek to extend her power westward into Europe in such a way that it threatens the security of the Atlantic states. The question in the Pacific is whether as nearest neighbors by land, sea and air, the United States and Russia will move toward rivalry or toward a common ground of understanding. The two questions are inseparable because, as the Russian statesmen have so often insisted, peace is indivisible. We should, therefore, be lacking in candor and realism if we did not face the fact that the crucial question of the epoch that we are now entering is the relationship between Russia and that Atlantic community in which Britain and the United States are the leading military powers.

NHA Asks 400 Millions

For New Housing

The National Housing Agency is requesting an increase of 400 million dollars in Federal Housing Administration's war housing mortgage insurance authorization to assure needed financing for approximately 100,000 additional family dwellings to be produced by private builders under the war housing program, Administrator John B. Blandford, jr., declared yesterday.

Blandford testified before the House Banking and Currency Committee on a bill to increase the mortgage insurance authorization under Title VI of the National Housing Act from $1,200,000,000 to $1,600,000,000 and to extend the FHA's authority to insure under Title VI to June 30, 1945 from June 30, 1944, the present expiration date. The bill was reported out of committee yesterday.

Workers Considered

About 85 per cent of all privately financed war housing now requires Title VI insurance, which is written by the Federal Housing Administration, one of the operating units of the NHA, Blandford said.

By July 31, approximately 245,000 dwelling units financed by mortgages insured under title VI had been completed or were under construction, while insurance commitments had been issued or were available for 80,000 more. The requested increase in authorization, if approved by Congress, would thus raise the total volume of war housing insured under Title VI to approximately 425,000 dwelling units.

The increased Title VI authorization is part of the over-all program drafted by the National Housing Agency to provide accommodations for approximately 1,200,000 war workers who will migrate to war industry centers during the current fiscal year, according to latest War Manpower Commission estimates, Mr. Blandford declared.

The NHA estimates that these workers can be housed in 925,000 accommodations of which 560,000 will be secured in existing private structures, 181,000 by privately financed construction or conversions, and 184,000 by publicly financed construction or conversions, he said.

Blandford said that in programing new construction of war housing, the NHA schedules privately financed projects except where there is insufficient prospect of a postwar market to justify private investment, or where the incomes of the workers to be housed are not high enough to pay rents which can support private investment, or where the requirements are so great that private productive capacity must be supplemented by public action in order to meet the need in time.

Canadas' Radio Men 'Frozen' in Jobs

Ottawa, Sept. 22 (AP).—Canadian selective service officials said today that a high priority rating has been given technicians, announcers ad similar radio station employes under recently announced regulations which freeze about 1,500,000 Canadian male workers in high priority occupations.

Like newspapermen, radio station employes will not be able to change their employment without a permit from local selective service officials.

Innocent Bystander

House Group Pulls Out of FCC Row

By Edward Ryan
Post Staff Writer

The House Judiciary Committee will stay out of the struggle between Representative Cox (Democrat) of Georgia and the agency which he is investigating, the Federal Communications Commission.

This decision was disclosed yesterday in correspondence made public by Representative Sumners (Democrat) of Texas, chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, and FCC Commissioner Clifford J. Durr.

Durr had petitioned Speaker Rayburn (Democrat) of Texas last May to oust Cox as chairman of the special House committee investigating the FCC, because of "bias and personal interest." The petition went to Sumners' committee. Durr then asked to be heard on the petition, renewing his request to the committee when Congress returned from its recess.

Chairman Sumners' reply to Durr's requests, said:

"The opinion seems to be general among the members of the committee, and is one in which I concur, that the committee has no jurisdiction, and no responsibility as a committee with reference to the subject matter of the communication (Durr's letter).

Durr's last letter, dated September 14, charged that the procedures of the Cox committee "have more than confirmed my original feeling that an investigation by a committee created and staffed as this one is, could serve no purpose except to prostitute the investigatory powers of Congress."

He recalled that his petition had cited "acceptance by Congressman Cox of a $2500 fee for services rendered Station WALB, Albany Ga., in connection with its application to the commission for a radio station license, and his use of this $2500 to purchase stock of Albany Herald Broadcasting Co., party to an application then pending before the commission for a transfer of such license."

Cox early last year described the transaction to the House and said that the $2500 went to a private charity.

Durr's first appeal to Chairman Sumners for a hearing said in part:

"Feeling as strongly as I do about the importance of the investigatory power of Congress, I would regret being placed in the position which could be construed as one of hostility to the exercise of that power, or as an indication that I have something to hide from Congress.

"However, I am equally strong in my reluctance to testify before the select (Cox) committee as now constituted because I am convinced that its chairman and staff have purposes to serve which are inconsistent with a fair and impartial determination of the facts."

Oil Situation Grows Brighter

By Edwin D. Gritz

Petroleum Administrator Harold L. Ickes disclosed yesterday that last week's Gulf Coast hurricane seriously interrupted movement of petroleum products to the East, although the general oil situation for East Coast civilians continued to be increasingly hopeful.

The fuel administrator pointed out that the American Petroleum Institute's weekly index of civilian oil stocks rose to 42.5 per cent of normal in the week ended September 12. Stocks the previous week were at 41.9 per cent.

Telegraphic reports from Houston, Tex., however, stated that evacuation of certain refineries because of the newest hurricane has cost 400,000 barrels of crude oil output, Ickes said.

"The same storm," Ickes declared, "held back the movement of 300,000 barrels of oil to Houston and Smith Bluff, Tex., from where it was to have been shipped to the East by tank car; and another 250,000 barrels of barge shipments of crude oil and petroleum products into the Houston-Texas City area."

While stressing that unforeseeable developments can still do much to hurt civilians as well as the military, Ickes added that stocks are considerably below the level on the same date a year ago when the index figure was at 59.8 per cent of normal, despite the upward trend.

"A hopeful aspect of this week's developments is that our inventories of heating oil again moved upward, as they have every week since August 14. Even with this improvement, however, they are not yet at the point where we can relax our efforts to build up these stocks."

On another oil front, the Office of Defense Transportation declared that improved petroleum transportation situation has made possible a major revision in the agency's tank barge construction program. The revision, in general terms, will mean the saving of nearly 2400 tons of steel needed for other war purposes.

The ODT announced that the steel barge construction schedule of 168 units has been cut by 13 units. This is in addition to the reduction of 36 units in the ODT program of 305 wooden tank barges.

ODT's over-all revision is 19 towboats complete construction, 2 cancanceled; 100 steel barges complete, 55 converted to hopper type, 13 canceled; 159 wood and composite barges complete as tank barges, 110 complete for reserve cushion convertible to any use, and 36 canceled.

Servicemen Dozed in Station When 277 Cots Were Available

Those servicemen, whose sleeping discomfort in Union Station was observed by Representative John H. Tolan (Democrat) of California on an early morning tour of the terminal Sunday, could have found more satisfactory quarters through the War Hospitality Committee, lodging committee officials asserted yesterday.

As Congressman Tolan continued to push his resolution that the Senate Garage be converted into a sleeping haven for homeless uniformed men, the committee pointed out that their records listed 277 cots available on the night in question.

Furthermore, officials reported, on only one weekend during the past 11 months had all available beds been occupied—and that was on the weekend of the "Back the Attack" show opening, when an unanticipated number of servicemen crowded District facilities.

Objection was voiced to Representative Tolan's plans of personally launching a serviceman's lodging center, while the Congressman countered that he did not know of the lodging committee's functions and merely was moving to combat the lack of adequate sleeping facilities here. He estimated that the Senate Garage, proposed site for the center, could house at least 1200 cots in the 72,000 square feet of space where some 185 congressional cars now stand.

Lodging committee officials, who desire the additional sleeping space proposed but are piqued by intimations that they are not fulfilling their jobs properly, pointed out that servicemen stranded in Union Station may contact either the Travelers' Aid booth or information booth there, or any local service club, for sleeping arrangements.

Court Dismisses OPA Case

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Sept. 22.—The case of Mrs. Margaret P. Guariglia, 39, former clerk of a ration board, charged with illegal possession of a large quantity of rationing stamps, was thrown out of Federal Court by Judge George A Welsh today, after he ruled that Office of Price Administration agents had violated the defendant's constitutional rights.

In announcing his ruling, Judge Welsh said, "I can say the whole proceeding here smacks of something totally un-American, wholly dangerous and completely subversive to our constitutional rights. I hope I never see our safeguards violated in this manner again.

"For that reason, I shall uphold a motion to strike out the evidence against Mrs. Guariglia, and I hold that her confession was signed subject to duress and under influence and cannot be legally used."

Mrs. Guariglia contended the OPA agents forced their way into her home without a search and seizure warrant, would not allow her to call an attorney, questioned her for hours and promised to let her go if she would say she had given a magistrate some ration stamps.

The agents testified that Mrs. Guariglia invited them into her home to make a search.

At the start of the trial yesterday, Judge Walsh said, "the sanctity of the home is far more important than any violation of an OPA regulation."

Niggeling Hurls 2-Hitter, Nats-Browns Split

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

All of Joe McCarthy's magic with a ball team will be in demand next month when he finds his Yankees aligned against the Cardinals in the World Series, because it is the worst Yankee team he ever took into a series. He'd probably tell you the same about his Yankees, if he didn't choose to be discreet.

POVICH

From what has been observed of the Yankees of late, a full-fledged mystery is posed: How come they're leading the league by nine games? The only man among 'em who is hitting more than .289 is Billy Dickey, and he has been playing only occasionally. Any baseball fan who saw the Nats whip the Yanks in three straight last weekend would agree that the best team in the American League won't be in the World Series.

The surprising item to this department is that the Yankees are still rated 13 to 10 favorites to win the series. When those figures were announced by Bookmaker Carroll in St. Louis last week, they weren't taken seriously. Supposedly, it was a cautious feeling-out by Carroll to see where the money lay, but Eastern bookies are now quoting the same odds. A Washington betting man yesterday got $650 to $500 on the Cardinals from a Baltimore operator.

When they make the Yankees favorites, the bookies are demonstrating an almost complete faith in the invincibility of Spud Chandler, the Yankees' 19-game winner. Their theory is that Chandler will be available for three starts, if necessary, and ought to win them all. Chandler transcends the whole series picture. The two-day hiatus in the series allowed by traveling, and the decision to let the series lapse for another day between the sixth and seventh games would allow for three starts by Chandler.

But outside of Chandler there is nothing very awesome about the rest of the Yankees' pitching. Ernie Bonham is no longer regarded as one of McCarthy's excellent risks. The Nats pinned his ears back the other day, and he had nothing on the ball. Charlie Wensloff hasn't been impressive, either. Marius Russo has a sore arm, and Atley Donald has never been rated series timber. Relief Pitcher Johnny Murphy may be facing a big job for the Yanks.

The one position, outside of Chandler, about which the Yankees can boast this season is their catching. Bill Dickey is having a great year with his .362 batting average, though playing in only 62 games. He'll be rested up for the series and will probably volunteer to catch every game. McCarthy likes Dickey in there when the chips are down, and so does Dickey. He'll catch if it hurts.

But in the one position where the Yankees can be proud, they don't even outrate the Cardinals, because Dicky's opposite number on the St. Louis team is Walker Cooper, the best ballplayer on the Cardinals. Cooper is hitting only .304 to Dickey's .362, but he is equally if not more dangerous with men on the bases, can hit a longer ball than Dickey and can catch with Dickey. And he's faster, what with the veteran Dickey always posing a double-play threat by his rheumatic pace on the bases.

All down the line the Cardinals figure to outhit the Yankees, who won't boast a single power hitter unless Charley Keller gets hot. At third base, where the Yanks have the amazing Bill Johnson, a rookie who has batted in 92 runs and is hitting .289, the Cardinals can point with more than a measure of pride to Whitey Kurowski, a .289 hitter himself. And Kurowski has World Series experience. Remember his home run that beat the Yankees in 1942?

Nick Etten, who can show a nice record of 100 runs batted in for the Yanks is hitting only .260, however, while First Baseman Vernon Sanders of the Cards is a .276 hitter. In recent weeks Etten's bat has been very quiet. At second base for the Cardinals, Lou Klein is outhitting Joe Gordon of the Yankees by 53 points, and at shortstop the spidery Marty Marion is outhitting his Yankee rival, Frankie Crosetti, by 50 points.

And if it is left-handed pitching that Manager Billy Southworth wants to throw at the Yankees, he can capitalize further on the Yanks' batting weaknesses. Because against southpaws McCarthy benches the left-handed hitting Roy Weatherly and Bud Metheny in favor of Tuck Stainback and Johnny Lindell, who are on the bench for nonhitting.

The best story to come out of last year's World Series was the case of the rabid St. Louis fan who had bet heavily on the first game which the Cardinals lost to Red Ruffing. At talk that the Yankees would go on to win the series in four or five games and wind up the series in Yankee Stadium, the St. Louis fan fumed:

"I haven't lost faith in the Cardinals. I'm betting $2000 that the series comes back to St. Louis."

His faith in the Cardinals was not misplaced, but he lost his bet, nevertheless. Because the Cardinals beat the Yankees in St. Louis the next day and then moved to New York and mopped them up in three straight at Yankee Stadium, putting an end to the series before it could return to St. Louis.

Galehouse Halts Nats' Win Streak In Second Game With Six Safeties

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

The Nats stretched their winning streak to 10 straight and then accumulated a one-game losing streak late last night. They were smacked down by Dennis Galehouse of the Browns, 9 to 1, after a twilight game in which Johnny Niggeling pitched two-hit ball to win the first part of the doubleheader, 4 to 0.

It was a grievous defeat for the Nats in that second game, a badly pitched job by Milo Candini, and presaged the death rattle of their dwindling pennant hopes. The Yankees, who beat the Tigers yesterday, now are in front by 9½ games and need only three more victories to clinch the flag.

The Nats' success for the night ended when Niggeling walked off the mound at the end of the first game. The 7000 customers saw him limit the Browns to two singles and no other kind of hit, and he didn't permit any of his former teammates to reach second base.

Another Impressive Job

For Niggeling it was another impressive job, his third victory for the Nats in five starts and his third shut-out triumph. He has now permitted less than one run per game in his five appearances on the mound for Washington, with both of his defeats coming in 2-1 games.

Their even break with the Browns permitted the Nats to remain three games ahead of the third place Indians who were idle yesterday, but it ended not only their ten-game winning streak but a chain of 16 straight wins in their own park.

Galehouse and his pet pitch, the slider, limited the Nats to six hits in that second game while the Browns were unloading a 14-hit assault on Milo Candini and his successors, with the emphasis on Candini who gave up six runs before he was ousted in the fifth inning.

Former Nat Ellis Clary and outfielder Al Zarilla were co-villains with Galehouse in bringing the Nats' ten-game streak to a halt. Clary banged out three singles and Zarilla swatted four straight hits, including a triple, before he was stopped.

Scored Two Off Mertz

The Browns didn't dally with Candini, wrenching two runs out of him in the first inning after Clary led off with a single and Zarilla doubled. The collected a third run in the second when Sullivan fumbled a ball after Clary and Zarilla again hit safely.

The fifth was a three-run session for the Browns. Byrnes led off with a double, Christman singled and so did Clary and a bit later Zarilla lashed his triple to center to put the Browns in front, 6 to 1. As if that wasn't enough they scored twice more in the sixth off Mertz, on two hits and a pair of errors.

The Nats never did get back into the ball game. They scored once in the second inning on a double to left by Priddy and a single to left by Sullivan, and that was all. They muffed a big inning in the seventh when they filled the bases against Galehouse with one out, but Pinch Hitter Gene Moore struck out and Case popped up.

Niggeling Mows 'Em Down

Niggeling struck out the first two men to face him and pitched two-hit ball through the first five innings. The only balls hit out of the infield by the Browns going into the sixth were singles by Rick Ferrell and Vern Stephens.

George Case and Stan Spence set the Nats up in a 1-0 lead in the third inning after two were out. Case smote a two-bagger to center and scored on Spence's single to right for the first run off Al Hollingsworth.

Mickey Vernon put another run in motion for the Nats in the fourth with a broken-bat single to shortstop. Gerry Priddy scored him all the way from first with a two-bagger down the left field line.

The Case-Spence combination fetched the Nats their third run in the fifth, with a rare play on which Case scored from second while Spence was grounding out, McQuinn to Hollingsworth, who covered the bag. Case led off the inning with a walk, promptly stole second and scampered all the way home on Spence's out, which found Hollingsworth in no position to throw to the plate as Case rounded third without pause.

Borowy Wins Sixth In Row as Keller Homers in First With Two Aboard

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 22.—The New York Yankees edged closer toward the clinching of another American League championship today with a 4-to-2 victory over the Detroit Tigers as Charley Keller collected his twenty-ninth homer.

The blow by Keller came with two aboard in the first inning and turned out to be all the Yankees needed with Hank Borowy pitching seven-hit ball for his thirteenth triumph and sixth in succession.

Borowy kept the Tigers scoreless until the sixth when Joe Wood tripled and came home on an infield out. An error by Frank Crosetti and two singles gave Detroit its other tally in the seventh, but in the meantime the Yanks had added a final run in their half of the sixth as Crosetti rolled into a force play with the bases loaded.

Cooper Stars As Cards Beat Dodgers, 4-3

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Sept. 22.—The Cooper brothers proved too much for the Brooklyn Dodgers to handle today as the St. Louis Cardinals squeezed out a 4-to-3 triumph that shaved Brooklyn's second place margin in the National League to half a game.

Mort Cooper acquired his twenty-first victory against eight defeats by holding the Dodgers to nine hits while Walker Cooper drove in three runs with four hits, one of them a homer with one on in the fourth.

This clout, Cooper's ninth of the year, put the Cardinals in front, 2 to 0, and caused Manager Leo Durocher of the Dodgers to remove his starting pitcher, Kirby Higbe, for a pinch-hitter in the fifth.

With Mort Cooper on the mound, the Redbirds presented their probable line-up for the opening game of the World Series.

Bagby Flays Boudreau; Demands to Be Traded

By the Associated Press

Boston, Sept. 22.—Pitcher Jim Bagby said tonight he is "tired of being made the goat" for everything that happens to the Cleveland Indians and that he does not want to play for Cleveland next year if Lou Boudreau is managing the club.

The ace of the Tribal mound staff told a Cleveland Plain Dealer baseball writer he went to club vice president, Roger Peckinpaugh a few weeks ago and announced he wanted to be traded to some other team.

"The front office has been fine," he stated, "and I know if I'm traded it probably will mean that I'll have to work for less money somewhere else. That's all right with me. I'm willing to make that sacrifice to get away from Boudreau."

The slim righthander declared he had been singled out for criticism by Boudreau on several occasions.

"A few weeks ago he left me behind when the team went to Chicago and the statement he gave to the press was that I needed a rest. Well, do you know what that rest cure cost me? Just $100. He fined me that for being out of condition. That was the last straw. That was when I went to Peckinpaugh.

"Jim and I havn't seen eye-to-eye on some things, but as long as he can pitch that kind of ball I'd be silly to trade him unless I could get something of equal value for him," was Boudreau's comment.

"I'd like to have him satisfied and happy, but I'd rather have a disgruntled winner than a happy loser."

Riddle Wins 20th as Reds, Giants Divide

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, Sept. 22.—Elmer Riddle gained his 20th victory today as the Cincinnati Reds overcame Bill Voiselle's four-hit pitching to beat New York, 4 to 2, but the Giants won the second half of their double-header, 10 to 4.

Riddle gave eight hits and the Giants were leading 2 to 0 in the first game until Buddy Kerr, rookie shortstop, put two men on base with errors in the seventh inning home. Then Estel Crabtree homered with one on in the eighth to win.

In the nightcap the Reds had a 4 to 2 lead going into the seventh inning when the Giants knocked out Bucky Walters with a five-run rally.

Moses Takes Lead In Base-Stealing Race With Case

The battle for the stolen base championship between George Case and Wally Moses waxed warmer yesterday with Moses taking the lead . . . The White Sox outfielder stole three bases in the first game of a doubleheader with the Athletics to move in front of Case, 53 to 51, but Case narrowed the margin to 53-52 when he stole second in yesterday's twilight game against the Browns . . . In the night game he failed to reach base in any manner . . . With the White Sox schedule showing two more games than the Nats face, Moses has a definite advantage in the race . . . Tonight's game with the Browns has been designated as a special ladies' day game, with Buck Newsom due to take the mound against Bob Muncrief . . . Newsom will be seeking his fourth straight in a Washington uniform . . . The Nats held an hour-long meeting in the clubhouse yesterday and voted on a split of their shares from the world series, but nobody would divulge how the shares were voted.

Halfback Bob Masters Released by Redskins

Bob Masters, an outstanding halfback and sprinter with Baylor University in the middle 1930's, who has been kicking around in pro football since 1937, was given his release yesterday by the Redskins, making the fourth time Masters has been excused from a pro league team.

The Redskin squad was reduced to the league maximum of 28 and at last Coach Dutch Bergman has what appears to be a stable squad. No additional trades are pending, the waiver list is clear of Redskins, the players who didn't fit have been weeded out and only Jack Jenkins, the rookie back, is known to be service bound in the next few weeks.

Masters, all-Southeastern Conference halfback in 1936 and a triple winner on the track in the 100, 440 and broad jump, first joined the Philadelphia Eagles in 1937. He played part of a season, was released, and joined the Pittsburgh Steelers the next year. He was subsequently released by the Steelers, and after playing with Wilmington for two years, rejoined the Eagles last year.

Masters, an expert welder in the off season, was signed by the Redskins as a free agent, but has played only a few minutes in the three exhibition games to date.

Rymkus Good in Practice

With Wee Willie Wilkin out of the starting line-up for the final exhibition test of the season Sunday with the Chicago Cardinals in Buffalo, and probably out of the entire game with a pulled leg muscle suffered in the scrimmage with Navy last week, rookie Lou Rymkus will get the starting assignment at left tackle.

Rymkus, a big fellow of 6-feet-1 and 223 pounds, a standout on the Notre Dame line, will get his chance after an impressive showing in practice. Otherwise the Redskin lineup will be the same as the one which faced the Chicago Bears.

The Cardinals, scouted by Maryland Coach Dr. Clarence Spears last week, will present two rookies in Don Currivan of Boston College at end and John Stokes of Centenary at center.

Oldest player in point of service with the Cardinals is Conway Baker, guard, who is in his eighth year with the Chicagoans. The five-year veterans will be in the backfield, Marshall Goldberg of Pitt and John Bukant, fullback from Washington U. of St. Louis.

Baltimore, Sept. 22.—Notables of the sports world gathered today at the Bethlehem-Fairfield Shipyards to witness the launching of the Liberty ship John J. McGraw.

The 208th Liberty vessel to be launched at the Baltimore yards, the McGraw was named in honor of the late manager of the New York Giants.

Mrs. John J. McGraw, widow of the late manager whose team won ten National League pennants and three world championships from 1903 to 1932, sent the craft down the ways with a baseball bat attached to the bottle of champagne.

Central Is Big Question Mark of High School Grid Series

Viking Team Will Be Fast, Coach Avers

But Unknown Factor At Other Schools Prevents Accurate Prediction, He Says

(This is the second of a series of articles on Washington area high school football teams.)

It's the "unknown quantity" of the other high school football teams that keeps Coach John Jankowski from predicting that the Central Vikings will repeat their championship sweep of the high school series last year.

The Central coach frankly admits he has no idea of the sort of opposition he'll meet. The other teams are green but unpredictable. They may have good workable material which will pull a whale of a surprise.

Next to Last Drill

Putting his charges through the next to last drill before their opener with Anacostia Friday, he said yesterday he liked the way his own not-too-experienced squad was handling itself, but pointed out that the other coaches may be having the same experience.

"If the other high school teams are as poor as they say they are Central will have a whopping good team," he asserted. "If they're good Central won't look so good."

John is relying on much the same system of play that pulled Central to the top last year. He's stressing speed.

"The backfield looks good and fast. We have three good passers and Sweeney at left half will be a standout. Aside from him we'll be using men who were second or third string last year."

If that statement looks too good when most of the other Washington teams are using almost entirely inexperienced men, let it be said that five of the starting line-up tomorrow will be new men. And by the same token, several of the holdovers from last year have little or no actual game experience.

Starting Line-up

Jankowski plans to start against Anacostia — which, incidentally, shouldn't be too tough a nut to crack, since its squad is small, light and green—this line-up:

Blakeman at left end, Kirsch at left tackle, Smith at left guard, Rector at center, Brown at right guard, Kramer at right tackle, Morris at right end, Bryan at quarter, Sweeney at left half, Katz at fullback and Donohue at right half.

There'll probably be plenty of shifts during the game, for John wants to see a many men as possible in actual battle, but he believes this outfit will be able to take care of itself against most of the opposition.

Norfolk Navy Wins

Norfolk, Va., Sept. 22. (AP)—Little Maxie Wilson came through in brilliant fashion today to register his third pitching victory as the Norfolk naval training station blanked the Norfolk air station, 1-0, to win the seventh and deciding game of the navy "world series."

Babe Sharkey Is Too Rough For Mat Ref

Boisterous Babe Sharkey won a flukey decision from snaggle-toothed, baldish Cowboy Luttrell, a fraternity brother from Texas, in the feature wrestling match before some 1200 incensed fans at Turner's Arena last night.

The end came with dramatic suddenness after 15 minutes of let's-play-murder when Referee Tiny Bouque disqualified Luttrell for misbehaviour. It was a toss-up as to who was the most surprised—Luttrell or the fans—for even the members of the Sharkey camp admitted that the Babe was just as ruffianly as his opponent.

Later, in the dressing room Luttrell vociferously asserted he had been the victim of a grave miscarriage of justice, and loudly stated he was willing to wrestle Sharkey again, sans referee and for no fee. This last statement, however, was too absurd for even Luttrell to believe.

Prior to the end, Sharkey had been tossed out of the enclosure three times, but had made up for this by stomping, choking and gouging his foe. Luttrell, too, had done some slugging and gouging to even the situation.

Johnny Long defeated swarthy Jim Stefano in the most popular match on the card, scoring with a flying head scissors after 20 minutes of a clean, scientific match. Stefano came into the ring smeared with a coat of grease which made it difficult for Long to get a firm grip.

The mysterious Blue Streak defeated gangling Tom Mahoney with a back body bend and press in 21 minutes of rough grappling.

Dick Lever was awarded a verdict over Michele Leone when the Italian was disqualified for roughness after 15 minutes.

In the opener, Lloyd Mathis, a newcomer, won via disqualification from tough Sailor Eddie Clay in 19. The arbiter offered Mathis the match upon four separate occasions and he accepted the final offer.

Red Cross Aided

Meckley-Cline Win In Mixed 2-Ball Golf

Kenwood Pair Has Low Net Score of 70; DeGruben-Newbold Second at Chevy Chase

By Merrell W. Whittlesey
Post Staff Writer

Mrs. Betty Meckley and a new mixed Scotch foursome partner, Kenwood clubmate, Hugh H. Clines, won the District Golf Association's annual mixed two-ball event yesterday at Chevy Chase with a low net of 70, derived from a gross 74 and four handicap strokes.

Only 25 teams turned out and contributed $125 to the Red Cross. The response was disappointing to association officials and plans to hold a District Amateur Championship at Burning Tree may be abandoned due to a lack of interest.

Mrs. Meckley and Clines put the tournament under lock and key with a selective drive, alternate shot first nine of 35 strokes, even par. Two fine birdies on the long par four second and third holes where Clines spanked out long drives, Mrs. Meckley nudged wood shots within 10 feet of the cup and Clines dropped the putts started the winning team to its regulation out nine.

Spotty Putting

A spotty putting streak from the 11th through the 14th holes cost the Kenwood combination four shots on the back nine, but they resumed par shooting on the 15th and came back in 39 strokes. The men played from the middle tees over the long championship layout and Clines, a two-time Kentucky Amateur titlist, boomed tee shots to points where Mrs. Meckley's accurate game paid dividends.

Baroness deGruben and J. L. Newbold, a host club combination, ran into trouble on the 11th hole but otherwise played consistent 41-41-82 golf and finished second by deducting 11 handicap strokes from their gross total for a 71.

Indian Spring Victory

Third net prize in war stamps went to Indian Spring's Mrs. Charles Jorg and Frank O'Connell who took 48 shots going out but came back in 42 for a 90, minus 18 handicap strokes for a net 72.

Due to the small field and the limited number of teams in a position to compete for low gross no gross prize was given. Mrs. Meckley and Clines had both low net and gross scores with the second best score from scratch going to another Kenwood team, Jane Nelson, a Wilson High School student and George Borsari. The Nelson-Borsari duo posted the best back nine of the day by three strokes, a 36, but an outgoing 42 cost them a place in the prize list.

Mrs. Betty Meckley and Hugh H. Clines (Kenwood), 74—4—70.

Baroness de Gruben and J. L. Newbold (Chevy Chase), 83—11—71.

Latsios Signs To Box Bacala On Turner Card

Nick Latsois, Alexandria's Golden Greek, yesterday was signed to meet Sam Bacala, Baltimore welterweight, in a special eight-round match in Monday's boxing show at Turner's Arena, featuring Holman Williams, outstanding Chicago Negro battler, and John Garner, District middle and lightweight titleholder.

Latsois, undefeated in 10 professional matches, was to have fought Eddie Kane recently at the ball park, but the bout failed to materialize when Kane and his handler, Glen Drake, refused to go through with the bout due to the fact that they claimed the Alexandrian scaled more than 145 pounds.

Bacala, veteran of Baltimore rings, has engaged in four good scraps in his home town the last few months. District fans have come to regard him as a willing battler.

In the meantime, Proomter Turner is seeking to bring Holman Williams here for three days of public workouts at Turner's Arena, starting tomorrow. The Chicago boy's Eastern handler, Charlie Rose, hopes to be able to arrange for Williams' appearance provided Williams will break up his training routine in the Windy City.

$66,900 Paid By Helis for Six Yearlings

By the Associated Press

Westbury, N. Y., Sept. 22.—William Helis, the New Orleans oil man who has just about taken some of the horse-buying markets apart this year, did it again today in the second, and closing, session of the Eastern half of the annual Saratoga sales, transplanted to the Meadowbrook Club's polo field here.

The Louisianan, who paid $66,000 for a yearling at Keeneland last month, spent $66,900 for six thoroughbred youngsters altogether, 63 head from 15 breeding farms—all in the East except Elmer Dale Shaffer's Coldstream Stud of Kentucky—were sold for a total of $211,300, an average of $3354.

Topping off his buying spree, Helis went to $18,100 to get a bay colt by Bull Dog out of Nimble Hoof—a brother to the good sire Coldstream. This colt was consigned to the Coldstream Stud, as were four of the five others Helis bought. Altogether, Coldstream staged one of the most successful sales of the season, selling 23 head for $136,300, for a $5926 average.

Flying Ebony, Winner Of Derby, Destroyed

Santa Barbara, Calif., Sept. 22 (AP).—Decrepit and feeble at the age of 21 years, Flying Ebony, Kentucky Derby winner in 1925, has been destroyed on the Alisal Ranch here, Mrs. Russell Perkins, his owner, said today.

Earl Sande was up on Flying Ebony in the 1925 derby. The horse won five other races in 13 starts, and his total earnings were $62,420.

"I see by Newsweek . . .

The most complete account of the Salerno landing yet sent by any reporter was wirelessed by Al Newman, one of Newsweek's war correspondents. Here are a few highlights, scribbled down between bomb bursts: 'Flares to the north—then heavy gun fire and flak. Red-hot tracer bullets criss-cross in the night sky and bombs burst on the water with yellow flashes and bellowing reports . . . The whirr of winches announces that our first boats are over the side. Then their powerful engines growl and grumble in the dark. Grim-faced, silent troops go down the rope nets . . . The row of LCTs on the beach belching vehicles looks like a long line of stranded, gasping whales . . . At 10:45 P. M. without warning all hell breaks loose.' Newman's report, appearing in the September 27th Newsweek, points out the importance of concentrated fire power . . . the help given in the invasion by naval batteries offshore . . . and the heroism of American fighting men in one of the crucial engagements of the war." (Newsweek's war correspondents are covering all battle fronts.)

"I see by Newsweek . . .

Eisenhower first intended to occupy Rome by paratroops! The armistice announcement was scheduled to be made simultaneously by Badoglio and Eisenhower. A few hours before the deadline, Badoglio notified the Allies that he would be unable to keep his word, presumably because of German pressure. Eisenhower then made his announcement and went ahead with plans for airborne troops to occupy Rome that night. However, when Badoglio later made his statement, he warned that German strength in the Rome area was too great to risk air invasion. As a result, the plan was abandoned." (Important: Back the attack—buy more War Bonds!)

"I see by Newsweek . . .

Victory over Germany may require 9 to 15 months. This is the consensus, writes Ernest Lindley, with two large suppositions: (1) That the Russians can and will hold the offensive, and (2) that the Germans will be unable to check our strategic bombing. Lindley says it cannot be overemphasized that Allied prospects of victory in '44 depend heavily on the softening of Germany by strategic bombing during the next six months. So far as Japan is concerned, only tentative estimates can be made until nine months from now when we know the results of offensives now in preparation." (Note: Signed opinions by recognized authorities are regular Newsweek features.)

"I see by Newsweek . . .

China is getting more aid than most people realize! Increasing aerial strength is making it possible to cut Jap communication lines constantly within occupied China, and make Northern Indo-China ports unsafe for Jap shipping." (Note: Letters from servicemen indicate how welcome "Battle-Baby" is to men at the fighting fronts. A captain in Alaska says, "Such fresh news is unheard of." A soldier in North Africa ripped off the front cover and wrote upon it, "This is as welcome as a letter from home!" And a Red Cross director says, "Battle-Baby is literally read to pieces here.")

A new and exciting Christmas gift for your boy overseas!

If you've ever been homesick . . . if you've ever been isolated in strange and foreign lands . . . you'll understand the deep and aching hunger our fighting men have for news.

To help satisfy this hunger, Newsweek brought out the first miniature overseas news magazine in February, 1943.

Newsweek's "Battle-Baby" is printed on lightweight paper . . . it has no advertising . . . and, despite the fact that it weighs only one-eighth as much as the regular edition, not a single editorial feature of the magazine has been left out!

Ever since October, tens of thousands of copies of the overseas edition have been flown to all fronts. In most cases these copies arrive in less than a week's time . . . almost as soon as our regular subscribers receive their copies!

You can now actually send a subscription of "Battle-Baby" to your boy overseas for Christmas! Just send us his name and A.P.O. number and we'll do the rest. Subscription rate is $3.50 per year by first class mail. Send your order to Battle-Baby, Newsweek Headquarters, New York 18, N. Y.

NEWSWEEK'S "BATTLE-BABY" BRINGS THE NEWS TO AMERICAN SOLDIERS ALL OVER THE WORLD! Privates in New Guinea and brigadier generals in Sicily are now able to get the news—while it is still news—thanks to "Battle-Baby" and the cooperation of the Army, Navy, and Marine Corps.

Hidden Liability?

Relay, Md.—Two Orphan's Court appraisers place no value at all on one of the tangible assets they found at the home of the late J. Seymour Waters. On opening a bureau drawer, they found a large and active black snake. Appraisers Samuel C. Williams and John P. McElgunn beheaded the intruder with an ice chopper.

Gubernatorial Eclipse

Omaha.—Three Governors—John W. Bricker of Ohio, Prentice Cooper of Tennessee and J. M. Broughton of North Carolina—visited Boy's Town here. They gained scant attention.

The boys surrounded Governor Cooper's chauffeur, clad in the striking uniform of a Tennessee highway patrolman.

Internal Revenue Bureau Plans to Hire 8500

Internal Revenue Bureau, faced with a prodigious paper shuffling job in administering the pay-as-you-go tax legislation, plans to hire upward of 8500 new employes by April. Very few of the new employes will be stationed here, not more than 250, while the remainder will be hired in the many field offices. New York, however, will get the largest bloc. One thousand new employes will be added to the processing section of the sorting unit in that city. In this section is sorted and filed together all the papers that must be filed with an individual's income tax return. Papers the country over are sent to New York for the sorting job.

KLUTTZ

To staff the field offices an estimated 7500 new employes will be needed and many of them are now being hired. Included in the number are 1100 deputy collectors, 1200 junior clerk-typists, 1600 clerks, 1200 stenographers, 1300 bookkeeping machine operators, 700 adding machine operators, 150 calculating machine operators, and 150 messengers. Thousands of the new employes must be sent to school and taught the mysteries of the tax laws before they can be put to work advising the public and auditing returns. Despite the enormous staff that must be built up, the cost of collecting every $100 in taxes has steadily decreased, but total taxes collected has shot up, too.

The two top spots at Internal Revenue are vacant, too. Guy T. Helvering, the able commissioner, is returning to his home in Kansas to be a Federal judge. His No. 1 assistant, Norman Cann, has resigned to take over the technical office in San Francisco. Cann was confirmed by the Senate only two months ago for the job he resigned. It's now regarded as certain that career man, Harold Graves, won't be elevated to commissioner. A political appointee has always been the commissioner and with an election coming up next year a politician will get the job. Insiders say a "West Coast politician" will be appointed. However, Timothy Mooney may be moved up to Cann's job.

Bradley Due to Quit

William S. Bradley, deputy administrator of War Food Administration, is expected to quit soon to return to his business in Dallas. He's a Chester Davis appointee, but Marvin Jones moved him up to take charge of fiscal, personnel, and business affairs of WFA. . . . The Administration has been trying to persuade former Representative Umstead of North Carolina to take over Beany Baldwin's old job as Farm Security Administrator. But the former legislator won't be convinced. Umstead was an up and coming member of Congress when he retired voluntarily from political life to resume the practice of law.

John L. Lewis' catch-all District 50 of the United Mine Workers is reported to be trying to organize Civil Service employes in New York . . . Part-time General Accounting Office employes at Friendship say their paychecks are delayed, too. And from a month to six weeks, which seems to be inexcusable. It's reasonable that their checks would be delayed, as they don't draw fixed amounts each payday, but not six weeks or even a month . . . Postoffice is the first large agency to go over its war bond quota. Its employes here had purchased $83,000 worth of bonds up to yesterday and their quota was $69,873 . . . Employes are protesting that rooms referred to them from the War Housing Center are dirty. All rooms are supposed to be inspected before they are okayed by the center . . . The girls at Meridian Hill are giving a dance for officers at the hotel Saturday night.

Decentralization

The decentralization of War Production Board will slow and it'll be months before it's completed. The employes have absolutely nothing to worry about, as they'll have jobs here if they don't want to go to the field. The industry division, construction and facilities sections will be among the first to be decentralized. The theory behind the idea is to establish high policy here and to shift paperwork and minor decision-making to the regional offices. A survey showed, for example, that 80 per cent of the paperwork in one section involved only 5 per cent of the allocated material. And all the paperwork was carried on here, which meant delays for the small businessman, who was trying to get some of the material.

The regional offices will be gradually built up and employment here will decline steadily. No large blocs of personnel will be moved out overnight. It will take time to acquaint the regional offices with their jobs and the decisions they must make. The regional offices would have been built up long ago if WPB had had established policies. . . . Dr. Donald Davenport of the Bureau of Labor Statistics, will speak on problems of postwar readjustment tonight at a meeting of the Society for Personnel Administration to be held at the YWCA. . . . Civil Service needs laboratory mechanics, $1440 to $2300 plus overtime. Also district manager for the Smaller War Plant Corp. at $4600.

Jeep Does Its Stuff for Russian Visitors

Four District Bills Go Back To Committee

Three bills concerning the District, introduced on the House floor yesterday by Chairman Randolph (Democrat) of the House District Committee, and another by Representative Hebert were referred back to the committee for hearings.

One was an amendment to an existing act in which motor vehicles are defined as "all vehicles propelled by internal combustion engines, electricity or steam." The amendment would make the act pertaining to persons fleeing from the scene of an accident or driving under the influence of liquor or drugs apply to any appliance moved over a highway on wheels or traction tread.

The Commissioners reported to Speaker Rayburn that the proposed draft of the legislation was submitted to the Bureau of the Budget and approved.

Another Randolph bill would permit members of the armed forces of other United Nations to import alcoholic beverages into the District. The present Alcoholic Beverage Control Act prohibits bringing liquor iinto the city in excess of 1 gallon.

The third Randolph measure affects the examining and licensing of the following boards and commissions:

Board of Accountancy, Anatomical Board, Board of Barber Examiners, Board of Cosmetology, Real Estate Commission, Commission on Licensure to Practice the Healing Arts, Board of Dental Examiners, Nurses' Examining Board, Boards of Optometry, Pharmacy, Podiatry, Veterinary Medicine, Architects and Boxing Commission.

Under the bill, all fees and charges collected by the various boards would be paid to the collector of taxes of the District and deposited in the Treasury.

The Commissioners declared that they felt the proposed legislation is "particularly desirable in that it makes possible a better control and accounting for public funds and tends to make uniform the financial procedures of the boards."

At the present time, the boards deposit collections in private banks and pay bills by drawing against the money on deposit.

Also introduced was a bill by Hebert amending the existing Children's Employment Act by adding: "Provided that during the existence of the present war ni which the United States is engaged and for six months thereafter, boys bewteen 16 and 18 years of age may be employed as pin setters in any public bowling allye until midnight and boys between 14 and 16 may be employed until 11 p. m."

Under the supervision of Col. Alexander O. Haff, the medical exhibits have continuously drawn great throngs—among the largest crowds of the entire "Back the Attack" assemblage.

A marionette show, already exhibited to thousands, will give a graphic, practical view of the immensely important care of the wounded.

Casualty Display

The exhibit is authentic—a replica of a jungle such as might be found overseas in the theater of operations now. The care given the wounded is realistically staged and the avacuation through its procedure from jungle aid station, portable surgical hospital, station hospital, finally the general hospital is followed attentively by the audience.

The show in the arena is on a much larger scale than the tent performances and should be seen by everyone who wants to know how the courageous work of the medical soldier is carried on along the battlefronts of the world.

In the arena the medical soldier will demonstrate and put to use all he has been taught during his training period. There will be tank casualties, Infantry casualties and their process through the medical routine.

A battalion aid station will be set up and operated in the arena.

The demonstration should leave no doubt in the spectators mind that the Medical Corps provides the wounded with the best medical care on earth.

Representative Randolph (Democrat) of West Virginia, chairman of the House District Committee, will speak at this performance.

Yesterday the Nation's greatest display of military pageantry and armed might, on the Washington Monument Grounds, was chosen as the locale for an unqualified acknowledgement of United Nations solidarity by Premier Joseph Stalin of Russia.

Hailed as as strong a commitment of amity with the Western Allies as Premier Stalin ever has made in public, he acknowledged the "great support in the fight against our common enemy" rendered by the United States in the manufacture of munitions and supplies for the Red army.

The Red leader urged the American people to purchase generously the securities offered, and by thus doing "help the joint efforts of the Allies to achieve victory over the bitter enemy within the shortest period of time.

With a background of heavy guns, tanks, planes, and other impressive gear for modern war, Maj. Gen. A. I. Belyaev of the Soviet air forces and now chairman of the USSR Purchasing Commission, read the statement at the request of Marshal Stalin, commander in chief of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics.

General Belyaev, flanked by nine other members of the Russian Commission, was introduced to the crowd on the eminence of the knoll where the monument rises, by Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, who later said:

"I know this important message from Marshal Stalin will be an inspiration to the American people. It will help us to equal and even surpass the 15-billion-dollar goal of our "Back the Attack" War Bond Drive."

". . . We know," said Secretary Morgenthau, "that throughout this long period of trial your people never stopped buying Soviet war bonds. That should be an inspiration to us, too. . . ."

Accompanying the party was an escort of Ordnance officers including Brig. Gen. E. E. MacMorland, Col. P. M. Seleen, Lieut. Col. O. R. Huff, Maj. C. S. Comeaux and Maj. E. P. Hogan.

Soviet Hero Present

Included among the commission members in the party was Comdr. Vram Arutyanyan, Soviet naval hero, who was decorated by Stalin with the Order of the Red Star of Russia following the defense of Leningrad.

Although the message from the Russian leader was announced in advance, several thousand visitors on the exhibit grounds quickly surrounded the area where the function took place.

After two days of inclemency which suspended the great arena show the field yesterday was dried with chemicals, additional tons of sand hauled in by Engineer trucks during the forenoon, and shortly after midday the sun.

Fourteen thousand visitors were recorded for the afternoon performance according to Maj. John H. Galloway, "Back the Attack" public relations officer, and 25,000 at the night arena show and exhibits.

Maj. Gen. Barney M. Giles, chief of the AAF Staff, in his talk during the afternoon told of a sergeant who was a turret gunner, who also was war bond officer for the Flying Fortress crew with which he served.

"You probably know," our Fortresses are equipped with an interphone system enabling members to converse with each other . . . On a bombing mission it sometimes takes many hours to reach the target, many hours before returning to the base.

"It is during these hours that the sergeant makes his bond talks. Five or six miles up, high over the Mediterranean and Italy, he practices his logic on rest of the crew, and they listen to him . . . His talks must be pursuasive. I know that that crew of 10 men is signed up 100 per cent."

High ranking AAF officers who accompanied the Air Chief of Staff included Maj. Gen. Henry C. Pratt, Brig. Gen. William E. Hall, Brig. Gen. J. W. Jones, Brig. Gen. Howard Craig, Brig. Gen. James M. Bevins, Brig. Gen. E. P. Sorensen, Col. William Westlake, Maj. Weld Arnold and Capt. M. R. Korshin.

Milton W. King, president of the District Bar Association, in a short address following General Giles, said "This is a total war and we must make a total effort."

60 Pigeons Released

A feature of the afternoon show was the release of 60 pigeons from the arena stage on a flight to their loft at Polk Field, N. C. Each pigeon bore a war bond message from various dignitaries in Washington.

Secretary Morgenthau's pigeon bore the message: "Your purchase of more war bonds is necessary to provide our men at the front with the fighting equipment they need."

"Are you doing your part to "Back the Attack" with your purchase of extra war bonds?" will be the query the bird allotted to Theodore R. Gamble, national director, war finance division, Treasury Department, arrives with at Polk Field.

This afternoon's program follows:

Noon: Grounds open. All exhibits.
2:37 Close order drill.
2:47 Treasury Department.

75 Housewives Needed in D.C. To Spot Planes

Seventy-five District housewives are needed to replace soldiers as airplane plotters of District skyways, if these soldiers are to see front-line action, it was learned here yesterday.

Women with free hours from 7 a. m. to 7 p. m. are wanted in this vital work, Mrs. Franz Stone, director of the antiaircraft volunteers, announced.

If housewives do not volunteer, the soldiers will have to stay, she said, even though working girls of the community are now completely handling the Army work through the night.

Movements Charted

They chart movements through Washington skys on a huge board laid out as the floor of an air-conditioned, soundproof room, secretly located. It is work that must be done 24 hours every day. Volunteers take an oath of service to their country and become members of the Antiaircraft Artillery Command of the Military District.

Most of our volunteers, said Mrs. Stone, have said they entered the service to replace a soldier. Others have come to "guard the Nation's Capital," to do something in the "never center of a defense area and be right in the thick of things."

Volunteers are now needed on shifts from 7 a. m. to 11 a. m., from 11 a. m. to 3 p. m., and from 3 p. m. to 7 p. m. They will be assigned to work four hours every third day, and will be expected to appear in slacks and shirts and sneakers. They should be between 18 to 45 years of age and have had a high school education.

The interview telephone number is Ex 6688 between 10 a. m. and 5 p. m. on weekdays, 10 and 1 on Saturdays.

OPA Rally Stimulates Bond Sale

500 Volunteers Meet to Pledge Renewed Effort In D. C. Drive

By Lin Celdon
Post Staff Writer

A meeting of 500 volunteer solicitors, a rally on the Mall by the OPA, and a cavalcade presented by B'nai B'rith yesterday gave new spirit to the lagging District Third War Loan drive here for 94 million dollars, 57 million of which have been raised, representing about 61 per cent of the total.

Prentiss Brown, director of OPA, told about 4000 employes on the Southwest Mall that it was up to OPA to take the initiative as one of the Government's more important agencies, after it was reported the OPA goal of $256,000 had been met to the extent of slightly more than 50 per cent. The rally was held after the close of the offices. Five Army bombers flew overhead as part of the program.

Edward Curran Speaks

Edward M. Curran, U. S. Attorney for the District of Columbia, was a principal speaker, representing the Third War Loan committee. He said the drive was "an opportunity for all to buy a share in America," and that "few of the people realize just how tremendous the national defense program has become." He emphasized that "if Americans feel today like the early pioneers did, America is safe."

The volunteer workers gathered at the United States Chamber of Commerce and pledged themselves anew to put the city over the top.

Baltimore Tops Quota by 27 Millions

Baltimore's quota of 170 million dollars has been sold, plus an additional 27 million just for good measure, the Treasury announced last night.

Maryland was the first State to attain its assigned quota, the Treasury said.

It was said the city's shipyards, airplane factories and other wartime industries which have increased the city's population with high wage-earning citizens, was responsible.

Ohio's quota of 698 million dollars was 88 per cent sold last night.

B'nai B'rith, Mrs. Anne Hurwitz, bond chairman, last night reported that the organization's rally held in the Shoreham Hotel brought the group's total to more than two million dollars. A cavalcade bringing war posters and Norman Rockwell's Four Freedom paintings to life was presented. Madame Ginia Ury, concert singer, sang several numbers and the Quiz Kids presented a brief performance. War veterans were present as guests of honor.

Soldiers Work Up to It

Two soldiers and a lone WAC threw Bolling Field's bond rally last night into an uproar of laughter. The WAC laid down 1400 pennies for stamps as Sergt. Bernard Sapperstein of Baltimore and Corpl. Harry Solomon, Cleveland, Ohio, awaited their turn. One bought a $500 bond and chided the other for buying only two $100 bonds, whereupon the second went to his barracks and returned with more cash and bought $350 more. Then the first dug down and bought more until each had $1000 worth.

At that time is was announced an unidentified officer had bought a $1000 bond. The enlisted men took one glance at each other and rushed the booth. Each bought a 10 cent war stamp, thus topping the "brass hat" purchase. Arm in arm, they left.

The Post Exchange fund, handled by Maj. Arnold Askin, bought $35,000 in bonds, bringing the total to about $40,000.

Rudolph Berger, district manager of Loew's, Inc., reported his organization, together with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Pictures, has purchased $100,000 in securities which have been credited to the local drive. The employes, he said, have bought $7500 in bonds, beyond their payroll deductions.

Maj. Henry M. Cunningham, district manager for the Ford Motor Co., reported the company has allocated $50,000 to the local campaign. Mrs. Florence Chaiken and Mrs. Esther Rubenstein, cochairmen of the Little Club bond committee, said the membership has raised $9875 thus far. There are 50 members.

A. W. Thomas, chairman of the credit union division of the committee here, said his group through September 21 had sold $582,000 in securities, including $450,000 in Series E bonds of small denominations.

WMAL today is to feature the sale of bonds by the use of many special programs.

Scheduled for today is the sale of $100,000 in bonds by Staff Sergt. Celia Merrill, director of the WAC band at the "Back the Attack" show to the International Business Machine Corp. at 11:30 a. m. The employes of the Washington branch already have purchased 26½ per cent of their gross payroll.

Unabated

Six Penalized As Result of Dirt Drive

Municipal Court action yesterday against six persons accused of violating District sanitary regulations served as evidence that the current campaign to eliminate insanitary conditions among food handling establishments was continuing unabated.

At the same time it was announced by Assistant Corporation Counsel John O'Dea, chairman of the District License Board, that a hearing was scheduled for next Monday for the ninth restaurant owner to appear before the board on recommendation from the Health Department that the license to operate a restaurant should be revoked on the basis of continued violations of the sanitation code.

Scheduled to appear is Thomas A. Jones, owner of a restaurant at 1425 11th st. nw., who has forfeited collateral three times since May 1943, for maintaining a dirty establishment. As a result of preceding hearings it was recommended to the Commissioners that the licenses of five restaurant owners be suspended for two weeks; one for three weeks and that two licenses be revoked.

Young's Return Awaited

It was learned yesterday at the District Building that action on the recommendation would be delayed until Commissioner John Russell Young returns to his office from his current illness.

Those fined in Municipal Court were:

Philip Rosen, proprietor and Louis Rosenthal, manager, of the Standard Pharmacy, 1748 7th st. nw. Both were fined $50 on a charge of having 10 pounds of bacon decomposed and unfit for human consumption.

William N. Byram, restauranteur at 200 Fenwick st. ne. was fined $50 for having dirty shelves, work tables, milk shakers, no lids on garbage cans, premises infested with rates and trash and garbage on the grounds.

Draws $25 Fine

Benjamin Lucks, market operator at 6041 Dix st. ne., was fined $25 on a charge of having exposed meat and fish, dirty carving utensils, maggots in a garbage can and rat feces on floor and shelves of a storeroom infested with rats.

Forfeitures of $50 were recorded against:

Fordyce C. Minnick, described as manager of the Meridian Hill Hotel, of 2601 16th st., nw. He was charged with having dirty glasses in a lunch fountain in the building.

Henry H. Holzbeierlein, operator of a bakery at 1849 7th st. nw. He was charged with having mixed garbage and trash in a rear yard, slimy water on floor, decomposed food in a drain, dirty shelves in a basement and three locker rooms in dirty condition.

Flying Band Plays $1650 Into Bond Till

They struck up the band in front of The Washington Post building yesterday noon—and passersby dug into their pockets to invest $1650 in war bonds within less than half an hour.

Shortly after the Army Service Command's "Flying Band" got off to a flying start with the Army Air Forces' song, almost 500 persons gathered to listen to the expert swing music of the band that has toured the country for the last 2½ years. Led by Sergt. Al Cassidy, the group is composed of men from numerous name bands.

Four girls of The Post staff were ready at a table in front of the building to translate the listeners' pleasure into money for Uncle Sam's fighting forces. Averaging $50 per person, 32 signed up.

First reports from the bond sales by Army pigeons which have been carrying messages by bond buyers from various parts of the city to the "Back the Attack" show for the last few days showed a total of $7500 yesterday. More than 200 persons have bought bonds at the city-wide rallies, announced by The Post from day to day.

The pigeons will be taken by Army jeeps to 13th and G sts. nw. at noon today. They will be at 14th and U sts. nw. at 2:30 p. m. and in Post Square at 4:30.

One of the bond messages carried by the pigeons in our country's service came from a boy who had raised the necessary $18.75 for a bond by selling bottles.

Today's Schedule For Jeep, Pigeons

The Army pigeons and the jeep traveling about the city in the interest of the Third War Loan will conclude its schedule today with the following stops:

13th st., near G st. at noon.

14th and U sts. nw., 2:30 p. m.

Post Square, 14th and Pennsylvania ave. nw., 4:30 p. m.

Police Report Less Crime In Capital

Arrests Decrease By 15,000 in First Seven Months; Jail Commitments Drop

By Helene Champlain
Post Staff Writer

In spite of Washington's overcrowded conditions—there is still plenty of room in its jails.

And the reason is the reason behind practically everything else that's happening to you—the war. The potential criminals are financing themselves leagily with war jobs, and gas and whisky shortages have played havoc with traffic and drunkenness violations.

Despite the great influx of population, warworkers, transients and members of the armed forces—there were approximately 15,000 fewer arrests by Washington police in the first seven months of this year, compared with 1942 figures, while jail admissions dropped by 3000 during the same January-to-July period.

Arrests Show Drop

Accounting for the fact there were only 106,475 arrests during the first seven months of the current year opposed to 121,114 in the 1942 period, Capt. Rhoda H. Milliken, in charge of the Women's Bureau of the Police Department, commented:

"The majority of law offenders acceptedly fall into the 19-to-25 age group, the same group that is now going into uniform. As for women of these ages, they are receiving reasonable wages as a result of the manpower shortage and are less liable to commit petty offenses."

"As statistics indicate, the Washington record is currently a good one," Maj. Edward J. Kelly, superintendent of police, acknowledged yesterday. "The people are behaving themselves, and the men in our department are doing a wonderful job."

Violations Decrease

With exception of persons held for investigation and fugitives, records indicate crime of every other classification is waning. Traffic violations, which normally constitute the major type of local offense, dropped from 73,000 to 54,000 in the comparative period, as local gas supplies declined and pleasure driving bans were introduced. Second in offenses, drunkenness charges, also decreased—19,000 to 17,000—perhaps due to whisky shortages.

Meanwhile, during the same seven-months' period, a similar decrease in the number of persons housed in the District Jail was reported—12,468 admissions in 1942 against 8,997 in 1943.

"War wages have increased the income of most persons here," commented Dr. James Allen Nolan, director of the Criminal Justice Association, as he explained sentenced offenders prefer to pay fines rather than go to jail. The preference of $10 to 10 days by the majority of slight offenders are borne out in Municipal Court records which boast a 24 per cent increase in revenue during the first eight months of this year. Traffic Court revenue increased from $38,879.40 to $45,757.65.

Dr. Nolan also cited increasing leniency of justices toward prospective servicemen and warworkers, whose war efforts seemingly eclipse their mino misdemeanors.

City News In Brief

Salesman Shoots Self

Charles Edward Redhead, 60-year-old clothing salesman of 619 C st. ne., was found dead in the bathroom of his home yesterday afternoon from a bullet wound in the left temple. A .32-caliber pistol was clutched in his hand.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald pronounced the death a suicide. Police said the body was found by the victim's wife, Mrs. Effie M. Redhead.

Soldier Severely Hurt

Pvt. Alan F. Norris, 28, attached to the Army Air Base at Camp Springs, Md., was severely injured while skylarking with three other soldiers in front of 1530 Pennsylvania ave. se., early yesterday, police reported.

The soldier suffered a possible skull fracture and broken ribs. He was treated at Emergency Hospital and then transferred to the Fort Myer dispensary. Police turned the case over to military authorities.

Firemen Rescue Child

Rolland Pincus, 4, put his 2-year-old brother in a closet and shut the door during a game of hide-and-seek in their home, 1415 10th st. nw. yesterday. It took a Fire Department rescue squad to set Lawrence free.

The door became jammed and the mother, Mrs. Pincus, made frantic attempts to open it for an hour before she called the firemen.

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsey

What's the Matter With Washington?

It seems that Washington not only is a hick town, but worse. It is a "huge filing cabinet," "America's county seat," "the city of robots," and "mediocrity's Mecca." These terms are applied to it by critics who take issue with this column's recent defense of the small town atmosphere here. The National Capital, they contend, has no right to go on complacently being a county seat but should grow up, mature in mind and spirit to represent the "best of the Nation."

Visitors from metropolitan cities, brought here by war service or business are particularly vocal in their dissection and criticism of the Capital, finding it "slow, dull and chaotic." An Army officer home from assignments in European capitals finds it "a cardboard city having no reality because its whole life is politics."

"I was born and reared in Washington and have lived in New York for the last 20 years. Although a New York partisan, I can see the other side, but probably bear out the saying that there's no more rabid New Yorker than the one who comes from somewhere else.

"I think the sometimes violent defense of Washington gives away the weakness of the defenders' position. It's like your uneducated man who loudly boasts he didn't go to college but look at him! Washington is not the cultural center of the United States. It is merely the seat of the Federal Government. It has nothing more, it wants nothing more. It glories in having no factories, skyscrapers, trucks in the streets, subways, etc. Everyone you meet in Washington whether he makes $10,000 or $1440 a year is merely a replica in varying degree of yourself. It is a planned city—planned for Government administration. It is a perfect consummation of that planning—and as dull as the results of all physical planning are. It is the product of a Nation which did not grow up as the Old World did.

Questions Stamina Of Capital

"Your defense of Washington as representative of a small-town nation is hardly acceptable. The city held up as representative of a nation should synthesize the best in that nation—not its mediocre average. As for glamour, since war and revolution have not touched this country as they did Paris, Vienna, Rome, Budapest or St. Petersburg, how do you know that Washington could stand physical blitzing any better? It is the mind and spirit of a city which conquer the barbarians. Paris has never been conquered. Washington has no mind and no spirit. It is only a huge filing cabinet. It could not stand up against tanks. But Winesburg, Ohio, could, and New York could.

"You claim that Washington is the personification of democracy because it is the Capital of a democracy. May I suggest that democracy is not a monument or a collection of buildings or an administrative order? I suggest you look for the personification of democracy where the people live it, not where its workings are implemented.

"We New Yorkers think that the finest expressions of the democratic spirit come from all this Nation—not only New York. But we work and hope for the day when New York will be the capital of the national spirit. We think it goes further toward that ideal now than any other city in this land."

What is the "best in the Nation" that New Yorker thinks Washington should represent? Is it not possible that small towns, even hick towns, could contribute it as well as the large cities? What was said in this column was that the people of Washington were largely representative of the small town population of the United States and hence representative of the Nation, which is still predominantly small town and rural. And the question was asked "What is wrong with that?" Is it inevitably assumed that what comes from the small town is mediocre?

As to the criticism of Washington that it lacks diversity and character because government is the basis of its life, that is much better justified. It is a point emphasized by many of the Capital's critics. To quote the aforementioned army officer, "In such capitals as London and Paris which have varied activities, those in the government can find associations and interests outside of it. They lead more normal lives, do not become ingrown, dull and narrow."

A telling point in regard to Washington's weakness is made by a critic who blames the system of Federal patronage for making the Capital the "Mecca of mediocrity." "If we could take job appointments out of the hands of Congressmen," he writes, "and build up a high class merit system of public service in which our best young men and women could look forward to building their careers, then we would have a different city. It is not so much that the small town people come here to work, but that the wrong ones come."

Market Report

Each morning a survey on fresh fruits and vegetables in the Washington wholesale market is made by the War Food Administration. Supplies which were available to retailers up to noon yesterday are given in the following report so that you may have some idea of the products you may find in local grocery stores and markets.

Plentiful — White potatoes, sweet potatoes, tomatoes, apples, limes and lemons.

Light—Lima beans, eggplant, sweet peppers, winter squash, cucumbers, cauliflower, chicory, mushrooms, okra, parsley, onions, greens, carrots, oranges, pears, plums, prunes, grapes and peaches.

Tips to Tenants

Apartment house dwellers have an important contribution to make to the fuel conservation program next winter. Radiators should be turned off before the apartment gets too hot instead of opening windows later to cool off rooms. Remember to turn off radiators whenever windows are open and to close bedrooms off from the rest of the apartment at night.

A Jersey for Juniors

By Ruth Gregory

Sometimes we're disappointed. We spot a charming little eye-catcher dress, start taking notes on it, and then, wham! we discover that the fabric isn't so wearable, or the price is out of proportion to the value, and so on.

But here's a dress that didn't let us down when we pulled out the old editorial yardstick. It's as good as it looks and one of the daintiest in this season's crop of wool jersey frocks.

Wool jersey, in case you don't already know about it (and you must if you've spent any time shopping), has become one of the pet fabrics of even top-flight designers. It's easy to see why—wool jersey is such a soft and adaptable material. You'll find it used as the background for beads and glitter in the dress-up story for this winter. You'll find it used for skirts, jumpers, blouses. . . .

And this dress is a prime example of how it's been introduced into junior dresses. (15 per cent rabbit's hair has been mixed here to catch the light and lend glint to otherwise dull-surfaced wool jersey). The delicate self-ruffle around the neck and sleeve-ends, the side-bow, give this dress just enough frill to satisfy a young miss' desire for feminine-looking clothes. And color—well, take a rainbow, wash it down to pastel hues, and take your pick.

For around $16, a schoolgirl or a young working girl should find a dress like this an answer to cold-weather dates as well as casual wear. Will it wear well? It will.

Man's Carpentry Workshop May Be Put to Use for Home

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

Do the men of your family like to carpenter in their spare time? And do they turn out strange and wonderful objects that you have to be nice about using?

Don't despair that the carpentry bench in the basement or garage will always be a responsibility to you—instead, try to steer them toward some handiwork that will be really useful. For a manual training man or boy in the family can be a real asset if you keep your requests ahead of his ideas.

And, of course, no woman in her right mind seriously objects to carpentry as a hobby, for there's nothing like it to keep the men at home nights! We know of one of America's wealthiest families (consisting of six sons, a 6-foot husband and a Dresden doll mother) whose home has the best space in the downstairs devoted to a work shop capable of building really ambitious projects.

Every sort of tool and motor gadget for building is installed and the place is a beehive of activity. It adjoins the drawing room, believe it or not! Sounds odd, but makes sense.

The best bet for guiding the work of men whose hobby is carpentry, (and tuck the idea away for after the war if it won't work now for many men are acquiring new manual skills in war jobs), is to go to the public library and look at books that give exact directions for making various pieces of furniture. Choose pieces that aren't too complicated, that have good lines, that you really need.

Girl Is in Dreadful Suspense as Wedding Day Nears, Because Her Fiance Has Twice Said He Doesn't Love Her, for Which He Later Apologized

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am engaged to be married to an Army lieutenant, who is now stationed in the South. We became engaged after more than two years' steady courtship; and he has been wonderful to me, except that on two occasions he has told me he no longer loved me. The first time he told me that, I immediately replied: "Okay, if that's the way you feel, I'll never see you again." At that, he broke down, cried and said he didn't mean it. He said he did love me and couldn't live without me.

I have just returned from a trip South to see him. During the visit, we were supposed to make final plans for our wedding, which was to be in a couple of weeks. Again, he told me he didn't love me. But just before I left, we made up and he said he didn't know what made him say it. Are these just the ordinary qualms that all engaged men get, at the prospect of giving up their freedom? Is it just a passing mood,—or something deeper than that? I love him very much and he has the power to hurt me deeply. I wonder if I should marry him, when I am so undecided as to whether he really loves me or not,—and when it seems he is only going through with the marriage because he doesn't want to hurt me.

We are entirely compatible, and share the same preferences in music, books, recreation, etc. He has traveled thousands of miles,—from all parts of the United States,—to see me (in preference to his parents) on his furloughs. He keeps all my letters and pictures, sends me nice gifts, beautiful love letters, etc., and then suddenly declares that he thinks he doesn't love me. The situation has me so worried that I cannot eat or sleep and consequently I have lost weight and look rather ghastly. Every day I come home from work, I expect to find a letter or telegram saying he has changed his mind and can't go through with the marriage. Can you tell from all this whether he really loves me? And what do you think I should do?

W. D. C.

Man's Cruel Behavior Has Dual Significance

DEAR W. D. C.: It is not so much the astonishingly variable and mutually unsatisfactory state of your fiance's feeling for you that should give you pause,—as it is his marked lack of manliness in relation to you: not only in cruelly knifing your self-esteem, from time to time, but also in having infantile recourse to tears. Beware of the man who "breaks down and cries," as a form of atonement, or as a means of by-passing a crucial issue, after having figuratively stuck a dagger in the heart of the woman he (purportedly) cannot live without. Such conduct on the part of a "man," and it is not uncommon, is invariably symptomatic of hysterical neurosis, underscored by weakness of character;—and one finds it usually in combination with one or several other salient features of instability The philanderer, the gambler and the drunk, for instance,—to name a few of the better known types of neurotics,—are evasively cry-baby personalities, who spontaneously use tears as a weapon of defense or as emotional blackjacks, when they find themselves in an uncomfortable spot of their own creating, in relation to the Leading Lady in their life.

Thus, the baffling question of whether, or how much, or how dependably your fiance loves you, is not really the dangerous crux of the uncertain situation that exists. It is a tantalizing question, to be sure. And, moreover, a question to which he, and he alone, could supply the positive answer,—and then, only after having honestly and fully faced and finally resolved his inner confusions and conflicts of feeling, with the guidance and help of a skilled psychiatrist or psycho-analyst. At the moment, it appears that his curiously contradictory (at once skittish and clinging) emotional preoccupation with you amounts to a romantic fixation, rather than to love. Love is a bona fide feeling of strong personal attachment based on sympathetic understanding and reciprocally stimulating appreciation of the real nature of another individual,—whose satisfaction and security have become as important to one as his own well being. It is a real and robust devotion, that thrives in intimate association.

He Is Acute Neurotic, With a Weak Character

A fixation, on the other hand, is a basically phony attachment conceived by an emotionally twisted neurotic for some person of the opposite sex who bears elusive resemblance to his fanciful inner image, or unrealistic version, of The Ideal Beloved. And since, in the case of a fixation, the real-life object of the fixation must inevitably prove on close comparison to be, quite innocently and cheerfully, a total stranger to the neurotic's cherished "inner image,"—it is rather to be expected that the intensely ardent long-distance suitor, animated by a fixation, will find himself bleakly struggling with a startling change of heart, when dealing at first hand with the flesh-and-blood creature whom he had been mistakenly courting as his soul mate; and particularly when faced with the prospect of immediate marriage to her. And this may be the explanation of your fiance's capricious behavior, as the wedding day nears.

But, as said before, it is not this neurotic deadlock of feeling on his part which primarily disqualifies your fiance to be a good husband. Rather, it is his dismaying lack of directness and strength in relation to his problem that augurs ill for the woman who lets her life become deeply involved with his. (And please get it firmly fixed in your mind that this whole painful story revolves around HIS problem of acute neurosis, and uneasy refusal to bring it bravely into the open and try to solve it. His vacillating attachment to you, and your highly disturbed and legitimately worried reaction to his irresolute skirmishing, are simply a further extension of that problem). You have already suffered greatly as a result of getting emotionally entangled in the quicksands of his personality,—not only because he IS neurotic, and the neurotic person always casts a blight over the personalities of those who become sentimentally enslaved by him, but also (and principally, I think) because of the over-all flabbiness of his character, which permits him to indulge in extremes of emotional hysteria at the expense of critically demoralizing you.

Girl Should Cancel Marriage Plans

If he were a man of first-class character, aside from his neurosis (which could be the result of unfortunate childhood experience or very misguided rearing), he would be above playing a cat-and-mouse game with your feelings, no matter how desperately agitated he might be, in his secret soul. For your sake, out of a civilized sympathetic concern for your peace of mind and future good, he would silently wrestle his way through to a definite decision,—be it right or wrong,—concerning his future policy with regard to the relationship, and then do his best to abide by it, suiting his actions to his words. That decision might be to marry you, even though his feeling for you, honestly assessed, left much to be desired on his part. Or, again, it might be to call off the marriage, once and for all, and abandon the courtship, because he knew he just didn't love you enough to want to trade his bachelor freedom for your society. But in either event, he wouldn't,—if he were a first-rate character,—keep you in such humiliating, and indeed sickening, suspense as you have described. And the fact that he could thus petulantly and cruelly try you, at a time when his tender regard for you should be at its fullest romantic flower, leads me to think the greatest favor and most lasting good you could do yourself, so far as he is concerned, would be to cancel the marriage plans,—and proceed to forget that you had ever seriously considered him as a husband-candidate.

Women's Club News

By Genevieve Reynolds

Postmaster General Frank G. Walker, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, and Mrs. Walker will be honor guests at the Woman's National Democratic Clubs tea Monday afternoon, September 27, 5:30 to 6:30 o'clock, at the clubhouse, 1525 New Hampshire ave. nw. The tea—an annual event—is held in celebration of Democratic Day, which was inaugurated at the suggestion of the First Lady, a few years ago.

GENEVIEVE REYNOLDS

Invitations have been sent to Vice President and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, Justices of the Supreme Court and their wives, members of the Cabinet, Little Cabinet and their wives. Also, specially invited are the Democratic women in administrative and executive government positions. Representative Mary Norton of New Jersey, principal speaker, will discuss, "Democratic Women's Part in the World Today."

The guest committee serving with Mrs. Francis B. Sayre, the president, includes Mrs. Edward C. Eichens, Mrs. Warren Lee Pierson, Mrs. Edward Meigs, Mrs. Howell Moorhead, Mrs. William Jennings Price, Mrs. Hugh Bennett, Mrs. Charles Brand, Mrs. Thomas E. Sebrell.

Mrs. Curtis Shears, immediate past president of the club, heads the hospitality committee. Serving with her at the tea table will be Mrs. Tom Connally, Mrs. Wayne Chatfield Taylor, Mrs. Will Clayton, Mrs. Paul V. McNutt, Mrs. Tom Clark, Mrs. Guy Mason, Mrs. Izetta Jewel Miller, Miss Lorena Hickok, Mrs. W. Meade Fletcher, jr., and Mrs. Stanley O'Connor.

Bits of This and That . . .

The Washington Junior Auxiliary of the JEWISH CONSUMPTIVES' RELIEF SOCIETY OF DENVER, COLO., opened its fall season with an informal membership dance last night at the Shoreham Hotel. This group is devoted solely to the maintenance of a nonsectarian sanatorium and declares that it is playing a vital part in the war effort. For war or no war, the group maintains that tuberculosis is ever on the increase. . . . A chatty letter from Emile Schuler announces a cold plate supper for members of the SERGEANT JASPER UNIT, NO. 13, AMERICAN LEGION AUXILIARY, Sunday night at her home, 9922 Rogart Road, Silver Spring, Md. Our Flag Chapter, D. A. R. is cooperating with the Back the Attack drive by buying another war bond, in honor of Our Flag boys in the service . . . Washington chapter of the IZAAK WALTON WOMEN'S AUXILIARY meets tomorrow, 8 p. m., at the home of Mrs. John Bell, 5332 41st st. nw.

War Bond Booth

Mrs. John H. Tolan, wife of Representative Tolan of California, has opened the Congressional Club's war bond booth in the Statler Hotel. Originally vice chairman of the booth under Mrs. Albert E. Carter, wife of Representative Carter of California, she has taken over the staffing of the booth during Mrs. Carter's absence.

Operating under the direction of the women's division of the War Finance Committee, Mrs. Tolan keeps her booth open from 12 noon until 9 p. m. daily, recruiting her staff from the membership of the Congressional Club.

American U. Reunion

A postvacation reunion that will occur when Mrs. Perry A. Fellows, president of the American University Guild, welcomes members of her executive committee at 1 o'clock luncheon tomorrow, at her home 1939 38th st. nw.

As the nucleus of the Guild membership of nearly 200 parents, wives of faculty members, faculty women, and friends, the executive committee group are especially conscious of their responsibilities for service in this second year of the war. Their objectives in the past have ranged from the financing of fellowship and loan funds for student welfare to acting as benefactors to students who need encouragement.

Martha Ellyn's Platter Chatter

Macaroni patties can be the answer to the main dinner dish when red points are scarce. Made with macaroni and shredded cheese you can be sure that every bit of the bigh-grade protein contained in the cheese will be utilized down to the last crumb. The receipe for making the patties is given on this page

Martha Ellyn

It may be the cooler weather which has put keener edges on appetites that is causing cooks to be much concerned about red points. Anyway, in the last week I have come in contact with many persons who say they are short on red points or haven't any.

Red point shortage may mean a minor catastrophe to some cooks but to others it is a challenge. Resourcefulness is essential to any cook these days when wartime menus must be planned. If shortages—either in points or supplies—play hob with marketing lists, then it's time to think of other dishes which can be prepared.

Ten to one, some of America's most famous recipes will be created out of the grim necessities of scarcity. And it doesn't mean that the dishes created will not be nutritious ones.

Foremost consideration in planning the main dish of a dinner is to see that the protein content dish is adequate. All protein foods must be used wisely if main dishes throughout a week are to be wholly adequate.

So if you don't have enough red points to buy a steak, a leg of lamb or some other favorite meat, then think about a main dish which will supply the necessary nutrition but won't require so many points.

Macaroni and cheese is a combination of foods that furnishes not only adequate protein but plenty of appeal. You don't have to make the macaroni and cheese into the familiar casserole dish either. Try stepping it up in a new way. Macaroni patties is an example. Cooked elbow macaroni, chopped cooked green pepper and onion, chicken bouillon cubes, shredded American cheese, eggs and spicy seasonings all blend to make a main dish which will be a winner. Both the eggs and the bouillon cubes add their protein values to that of the cheese. Here's a suggested menu which includes the macaroni patties:

Dinner Menu

Macaroni Patties
Baked Squash Harvard Beets
Apple-Celery Salad
Enriched Bread Butter
Spice Cake Tea

The following is the recipe for preparing the macaroni patties:

MACARONI PATTIES

Cook 1 cup elbow macaroni in salted boiling water until tender. Drain and blanch. In the top of a double boiler cook 2 tablespoons chopped green pepper and 2 tablespoons chopped onion in 2 tablespoons butter, margarine or drippings until tender. Blend in 3 tablespoons flour and add 1 cup milk and 2 chicken bouillon cubes which have been dissolved in ¼ cup boiling water. Place over boiling water and cook, stirring frequently until thick. Slowly add 1 beaten egg, then 1½ cups shredded American cheese, ½ teaspoon salt, a dash of pepper, 1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce, the macaroni and ¼ cup of cracker crumbs. Remove from the heat and spread the mixture in a greased shallow pan (7x11 inches). Chill. Cut into eight rectangular patties. Dip each in fine cracker crumbs (about ¾ cup), then in a mixture of 1 beaten egg and 1 tablespoon cold water, and again in the crumbs. Brown slowly on both sides in hot fat and garnish with parsley.

Your Baby and Mine

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

It would seem most parents consider an allowance to be a sum of money handed to the child for some specific purpose.

They state that the child has 15 cents weekly and then explain what he does with every cent of it. This is no satisfaction to the child and no education in the use of money. It is for him merely the temporary exercise of putting money in this or that slot, or this or that stamp book.

An allowance is worthy of the name only when it allows the child the privilege of spending and of management. The first sums will be so small that only spending is possible. Later, as the child's judgment grows, he should accept added responsibilities, to put aside some portion for saving, to buy school or personal supplies. But always there should be enough left over to allow for the child to spend according to his own desires.

All children will not react to an allowance in the same way. Some are natural-born spendthrifts and some misers. These reactions are indicative of the child's personality and are the results of his parental and his environmental influence. Money cannot mean the same thing to all children because their need for it and their experience with it are so different. Children of the same age, given the same allowance, will not use it the same way.

But this knowledge does not argue that a parent should take away the spendthrift's allowance and increase the miser's. It makes it all the more important that all children be allowed to discover what money will and will not do.

The child who filches coins from parent or associates may have an allowance, as many a puzzled parent explains, but no money to spend in ways which he himself initiates.

An allowance must serve many purposes. It must give the child an opportunity to satisfy some of his own desires, it must teach him the inflexibility of any set sum and thus develop his capacity to manage it.

This can be accomplished only by giving the child a consistent sum at stated intervals and allow him the privilege of experimenting with it. The sum will be one which matches the parent's own finances and, within reason, those of the child's own desires and needs. That allowance should be his and as untouchable as the allowances of father and mother.

Here From Texas

Mrs. William Crute of Houston, Tex., is spending a month in the I Street home of her father, Dr. George Tully Vaughan, professor emeritus of Georgetown University. Among the fetes given in honor of the visitor was the luncheon on Tuesday at the Mayflower at which Mrs. Leo Kasehagen was hostess.

Mrs. Jesse Jones to Sponsor Aircraft Carrier San Jacinto

There'll be more than one heart swelling with pride when Mrs. Jesse Jones, wife of the Secretary of Commerce, crashes the champagne bottle against the prow of the aircraft carrier, San Jacinto, as she glides gracefully down the ways at Camden, N. J., on Sunday.

The hearts of a number of prominent Houstonians up from Texas for the occasion will be beating a bit faster at that ceremony, for the San Jacinto is one of their contributions to the war. Built with funds oversubscribed for the rebuilding of the brave cruiser, the Houston, lost in the Pacific, the San Jacinto has been named in commemoration of the battle in which 800 Texans defeated the Mexican General Santa Ana and his army of 3000 in April, 1836.

When the citizens of Houston were called upon to raise 30 million dollars for the new Houston they responded eagerly, boosting the sum to 80 millions. And this from a city whose population is little more than 500,000! What was left after the Houston had been launched went into the San Jacinto, which had been converted from a 10,000-ton cruiser.

The Secretary will go up with Mrs. Jones on Sunday and they will be accompanied by their daughter-in-law, Mrs. Tilford Jones, who will arrive tomorrow from Houston. Mrs. Hally Bryan Perry, also of Houston and a descendant of that great statesman, Sam Houston, will be matron of honor for Mrs. Jones, and a group of prominent Houstonians will accompany her to New York for the event.

It's nothing new to the wife of the Secretary of Commerce to be asked to sponsor a ship. She christened the James Madison, a Liberty ship, down in Texas last December. She's been asked to be leading lady in similar ceremonies since then. But now with priorities on travel, Mrs. Jones has, when it's possible, turned over the honors to her granddaughter, Mrs. John Boehck, the former Miss Audrey Jones, a frequent visitor to her grandparents before her marriage last year to the good-looking young Naval ensign, who is now a ferry pilot stationed in California.

"There'll be no gala celebration in connection with the launching on Sunday; no speeches, no bands, no gay luncheon to follow the ceremony. In wartime it's time that counts, and no sooner is one ship sent down the ways than the keel of another is already in place. So-o-o, almost immediately after the San Jacinto sails out to sea, the Secretary and Mrs. Jones will be on the train back to Washington.

Miss Danly, Ensign Kefauver, Are Married in Indiana

MRS. CLARENCE E. KEFAUVER, JR.

Ceremony Takes Place Shortly After Bridegroom Receives Navy Commission

An out-of-town wedding of interest here took place yesterday in South Bend, Ind., when Miss Dorothy Jean Danly became the bride of Ensign Clarence Eugene Kefauver, jr., USNR.

The bride is the daughter of Ernest Everett Danly and the late Mrs. Danly of Foxhall rd., and Ensign Kefauver is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Eugene Kefauver, also of this city.

Officiating at the afternoon ceremony in the South Bend Church was the Rev. R. A. Gaffeney. Mr. Danly gave his daughter in marriage. She was attired in a gown of white satin, designed with long sleeves and short train. Her veil of illusion was held with a headpiece of heirloom rosepoint lace and she carried a white prayerbook and bouquet of orchids.

The bride was unattended, and Frank Ruark of Chicago served as best man. A small reception followed for members of the families and close friends. The couple left immediately afterward for Berkeley, Calif., where the bridegroom will be stationed.

A graduate of George Washington University, the bride attended Oberlin College and is a member of Chi Omega Sorority. Ensign Kefauver received his commission in the Naval Reserve from the Midshipmen's School at Notre Dame a few hours before the wedding. He was graduated from Duke University in June and is a member of Pi Kappa Alpha, Omicron Delta Kappa and Phi Beta Kappa Fraternities.

Jean Barnes Is Bride of Lieut. Baldwin

The marriage of Miss Jean MacLean Barnes to Lieut. Elmer Gordon Baldwin took place on Saturday at the All Souls Memorial Church. The bride is the daughter of Col. Elmer Ellsworth Barnes, U. S. A., and Mrs. Barnes of this city, and Lieutenant Baldwin is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James Lynn Baldwin of Portland, Oreg.

Officiating at the 8:30 ceremoney was the Rev. H. H. D. Sterrett. In the absence of her father, who is overseas, the bride was given in marriage by her brother, Lieut. John Winthrop Barnes. Her gown was of ivory satin and her veil was trimmed with a panel of heirloom Spanish lace. Her flowers were ivory roses and Stephanotis.

Mrs. John Winthrop Barnes was matron of honor, wearing a gold-colored faille gown and carrying a bouquet of flame dahlias. Bridesmaids were Mrs. Hugh McCormack Hayden, Mrs. Wesley Fuller, and Miss Patricia Dissinger. Their costumes were similar to that worn by the matron of honor. Lieut. Dale Baldwin served his brother as best man, and ushering were Lieut. Carl Pedersen, Lieut. Morris Coates, Lieut. Wesley Fuller and Lieut. Fred Nabors.

A reception followed at the Kennedy-Warren. The bride attended St. Helen's Hall, in Portland, and Wellesley. Lieutenant Baldwin was graduated from the University of Idaho in 1939 and is commissioned in the Corps of Engineers.

Lieut., Mrs. Doing In New Orleans On Honeymoon

Lieut. and Mrs. William Perry Doing are spending their honeymoon in New Orleans, after having been married in Washington on Monday, September 13. Mrs. Doing is the former Miss Kathleen Camille Mullaney, daughter of the late Mrs. Marie Florence Mullaney. She was attended by her sister, Mrs. Jean Swift, and Clayton Emig Doing served as best man for his brother.

Newlyweds On Honeymoon

Currently on a wedding trip to Southern Pines, N. C., are Maj. Charles R. Newton of the office of the Assistant Chief of Staff, and his bride, the former Miss Mary Hayes Blacknall.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Willis Blacknall of Henderson, N. C., and Major Newton is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Newton of New Britain, Conn.

Their marriage took place at the Main Post Chapel at Fort Bragg, N. C., last Friday, with Col. James L. McBride, chaplain, officiating. The bride was attired in ivory brocaded taffeta and a finger-tip-length veil of illusion, held with a pearl tiara. Her bouquet was of white roses. Mrs. J. E. Elrod, jr., was matron of honor, and George R. Newton was his brother's best man.

Miss Dozier Will Marry Lieutenant

Mrs. Nellie Katherine Dozier of Silver Spring, Md., announces the engagement of her daughter, Miss Ozelle Dozier, to Lieut. Donald James McNassor, USA, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. McNassor of Denver, Colo. The wedding will take place October 13 at the Woodside Methodist Church.

The bride-to-be is assistant chief of the War Price and Rationing Board in Silver Spring.

POINT-THRIFTY RECIPE

Sauté 1 cup sliced mushrooms and 4 tbsps. chopped green pepper 5 min. in 4 tbsps. margarine or butter. Stir in 4 tbsps. flour. Add 2 cups milk (or milk and veal stock) and cook, stirring, until thickened. Season well. Add 2 cups cubed cooked veal, 2 tbsps. chopped pimiento and ½ cup Sherry wine. Heat; serve on toast or crisp waffles. Serves 6.

● Ever serve succulent veal with a creamy white sauce blessed by a touch of Sherry wine? It's marvelous! And before dinner, it's nice to serve small glasses of the same nutlike California Sherry. Why don't you try this pleasant combination soon? Wine Advisory Board, San Francisco, California.

MRS. BENJAMIN L. MOORE, who before her marriage a few days ago was Miss Bessie Cupp. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Cupp of Mifflintown, Pa.

Mrs. Vandegrift, Like Others, 'Busy Waiting' for War's End

In her home on Forty-fourth st. Mrs. Alexander A. Vandegrift "keeps busy waiting." The waiting is for her husband, newly promoted Lieutenant General Vandegrift, who is in the South Pacific, and her son Maj. A. A. Vandegrift, jr., who is now in training at Camp Pendleton, Calif.

But warm-spirited Mrs. Vandegrift finds a lot of worthwhile things to do during this waiting period. Of course she does her share of Red Cross work, is a member of the board of the Soldiers, Sailors and Marines Club, and is always "on call" for service good works.

One little household duty Mrs. Vandegrift has to attend to is to notify the telephone company of her husband's new status. He's still listed as a brigadier general. Although his nomination to lieutenant general was only presented to the Congress on Tuesday by President Roosevelt, this Leatherneck leader, who led the Marines in the invasion of Guadalcanal, has been wearing three stars since July 31. When Congress is not in session, the President is empowered to make an "interim appointment," which can subsequently be okayed by the legislators.

Almost anytime these days, Mrs. Vandegrift is holding "open house" for her fellow waiters. She feels that this is the time for people to be together, for people to gain strength from each other.

Born in Amherst, Va., Mrs. Vandegrift started life as Miss Mildred Strode, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Aubrey H. Strode. One of a large family—she has five sisters and two brothers—she grew up on the family estate, Kenmore, just outside of Lynchburg. She is a graduate of Randolph-Macon Women's College and met her husband in Charlottesville just after he had graduated from the University of Virginia. Since then she has made homes for him in all parts of the world, from Haiti to Panama to China.

Gen., Mrs. J. W. Byron At Hot Springs

Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Joseph W. Byron of Arlington, Va., have joined the Washington colony for an early fall visit at The Homestead at Hot Springs, Va. Also there are Capt. and Mrs. Frederick P. Lawrence of Arlington Forest, Va.

Virginians Are Entertaining French Visitors

If Virginians are mixing a French accent into their Southern drawl, there is a good reason for it. An influx of French visitors in Virginia during the past few days will account for it.

The French Commercial Attache and Mme. Jean Chalon have been house guests of Mr. and Mrs. Nathaniel H. Morrison at their estate, Welbourne. They had with them Miss Susanne Le Clere of Paris, who has been in Washington for two years. She will be leaving soon to take a post in Algiers. Lieutenant Black, French instructor at the Naval Academy, was also in the party.

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Tartiere have been entertaining Pierre Bertrand and Gerard Limousin, two sailors of the French navy, who are on two-week leave from the Brooklyn Navy Yard. Mr. and Mrs. Louis Garnier entertained in their honor the other evening at a dinner in their home on the Paul Mellon estate near Middleburg.

* * * *

Among those from Washington now at the Homestead in Hot Springs, Va., are Mr. and Mrs. John N. Ditzler, Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Cronim, Miss Jane M. Barrett, Miss Bertha M. Muth and M. P. Skinner.

Miss Wilkinson Is Married at Church Here

At a ceremony yesterday in the Lincoln Chapel of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, Miss Betty Gayle Wilkinson became the bride of Lieut. Lewis P. Kilbourne, USMC. The Rev. Dr. Peter Marshall officiated at the 8 o'clock rites.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Wilkinson of Arlington and was given in marriage by her father. She wore a street-length frock of white transparent velvet and a Juliet cap encrusted with pearls and set off with a white shoulder-length veil. A corsage of orchids completed her costume.

Mrs. Charles Woodman Harris, jr., was matron of honor, and Miss Lorraine V. Redmann of LaCrosse, Wis., was maid of honor. Both wore dresses of royal blue transparent velvet and Juliet caps of sequins. They carried small bouquets.

Lieut. Stuart Torrance, USMC, was best man, and Lieut. Richard DeLancie, USN, was usher. Following the wedding, the couple left for a southern wedding trip. They will go from there to Louisiana to visit the bridegroom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Armstead R. Kilbourne, and then on to California.

The bride, a graduate of George Washington university, is a member of Zeta Tau Alpha fraternity. Lieut. Kilbourne is a graduate of Louisiana State University at Baton Rouge and is a member of Kappa Alpha fraternity.

Major Kassan Is Engaged to New York Girl

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Z. Suchin of Dobbs Ferry, N. Y., have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Rosalind Suchin, to Maj. Robert J. Kassan, USA Medical Corps, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Kassan of Washington, D. C.

Miss Suchin was graduated from Highland Manor School and Junior College, Tarrytown-on-Hudson, N. Y., where she held the tennis championship for four years, and the Washington School for Secretaries.

Major Kassan was graduated from George Washington University Medical School. Following his internship at Emergency Hospital in Washington and Charity Hospital in New Orleans, La., he attended the University of Pennsylvania Graduate School of Medicine and served on the faculty of George Washington University School of Medicine. He is a member of Upsilon Lambda Phi, Phi Epsilon Pi and Phi Delta Epsilon fraternities. While at medical school he was elected to the Smith-Reed Russell Honor Society. Major Kassan is now stationed at the United States Military Academy, West Point, N. Y., where he is on the staff of the station hospital.

Facts and Faces About Washington

SIGNS OF THE TIMES: Parties a-plenty are dotting fashionable Washington's calendar these days, but they are a far cry from the big-time fetes that set the social pace back in the lush, plush prewar days . . . Keynoted by simplicity and informality, afternoon get-togethers begin late, break up early . . . Most dinners are set for shortly after 7 o'clock ("an outrageously early hour," observed a New Yorker hurrying off to a Washington dinner the other evening) . . . Around 10 o'clock, guests begin looking for their wraps; only on Saturday nights do the smartest-set parties go on until midnight and afterward.

No matter what type the entertainment, or where it is, all conversation centers around the war, the home-front situation, or the coming presidential campaign. At a small gathering the other afternoon at the Legation of Luxembourg, everybody seemed to be talking about the Italian front. Mme. le Gallais, wife of the Minister of Luxembourg, and Prince Pignatelli conversed in Italian; speculated on what might be happening to their relatives in Italy. She is a Venetian by birth; he hails from Florence. Both follow the war news avidly, hoping that their relatives will not suffer at German hands as the Allied invasion proceeds.

The party, which wasn't really a party at all, but just an "after 6 o'clock" reunion of friends, was as pleasant as any gathering can be in wartime Washington. A handful of diplomats, a few from the residential contingent, and a half dozen Army and Navy officers dropped in, en route to dinners elsewhere. "I believe you and I are the only columnists here," Neil Vanderbilt said to me, in passing, as he circled the room in search of copy for his column which is syndicated from New York. "But it's not a party . . . and besides, it's all off the record as are most Washington get-togethers these days," Baroness Stackelberg informed us about that time.

Party or not—off the record or on—it was a stimulating interlude, and I wish the coming season would be heavily accented with similar get-togethers at other legations and embassies.

TOWN TALK HAS IT that Hildegarde and Henry Kaiser might have gone into the big-time as an entertainment team, if the famous night-club singer's contract at the Statler hadn't finished when it did. Here's why: On the evening Hildegarde opened her engagement here, Kaiser was at a nearby table. In her unique way of drawing spectators into her act, she got the noted shipbuilder up on the stage, sang a song to him, discovered he played up to the microphone pretty well himself, and then wound up her act with him by bestowing a big kiss on his cheek. The audience liked it; was lavish in its applause.

At her final performance Tuesday night Kaiser again was discovered in the Statler's Embassy Room and was soon on his way to the platform for a return engagement with Hildegarde. She sang another song to him; he voiced a few impromptu asides. The "act" brought down the house. "I'd never have to worry about an audience . . . if that man was always around to help me out," Hildegarde said later. Incidentally, although few in her audience knew it, Hildegarde was so ill before her final performance that her manager wondered if she could go on at all. "Of course, I can . . . and will," the singer told a few of us who saw her in her apartment between acts. "After that, and my radio show on Wednesday, I'll take off to a nursing home and get a good rest."

SENATOR MALONEY of Connecticut is a sucker—for the all-day kind. For candy of any kind, in fact. He has to wrestle with temptation every time he passes a shop where sweets are displayed in the window. Usually, temptation wins . . . Sure to be a best seller is Charles Michelson's autobiography for which he has just signed a contract with Putnam's. Friends say, however, he won't have much time to spend on it until after the 1944 campaign. The Democratic National Committee will be needing his help through that . . . Most consistent bow-tie wearer in the House of Representatives is Lyndon Johnson of Texas . . . .

Mrs. Roosevelt's record as a swift traveler may soon be broken by Secretary Knox, whose current overseas jaunt seems to be charting a record all its own. Irish reporters report that Secretary Knox, accompanied by Admiral Harold R. Stark, have negotiated a breath-taking schedule ever since they landed there. I love the remark of one: "Not even Mrs. Roosevelt went so fast when she was here."

MEAT RATIONING may make unpleasant inroads into menu choices for civilians, but—thank goodness—the men in service don't suffer. Here's partial proof: Lieut. Comdr. Roger Putnam, one-time candidate for the Governorship of Massachusetts and now stationed at Norfolk, was in Washington recently and entertained guests for dinner at a local hotel. As the party consulted the menus, a waiter approached and proudly told Commander Putnam: "You can have filet mignon, if you want it."

"Fine, go ahead," said Commander Putnam. "We get so much meat in the Navy . . . I'll take fish." . . .

Here and there: In town for the past few days, David Cohn, the author, took off yesterday to St. Louis to spend a week. He's on the trail of more material for the book he's writing about the influence of the automobile on American life. Incidentally, the Spanish publication rights for his "Love in America" have just been bought. Meanwhile, the British rights still go a-begging. British publishers say the tome is "too American" for their readers' taste . . . Attractive newcomers to the Capital are Mr. and Mrs. Charles Harjes, who have taken the house at 1308 35th st. They have been living in Coral Gables, Fla., the past three years, and before that, in Rio de Janeiro. Mr. Harjes is connected with the Export-Import bank . . . Mrs. Carrere Barbour has leased Miss Margaret Frazer's house at 1409 Thirtieth st.

Miss Kappler To Be Wed to J. E. Palmer, Jr.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Joseph Kappler announce the engagement of their daughter, Suzanne, to Lieut. (j. g.) James E. Palmer, jr., USCGR, son of Commissioner and Mrs. James E. Palmer. The senior Mr. Palmer was formerly an attorney of Roanoke, Va., and is now with the United States Conciliation Service.

The bride-elect attended school in Washington and completed her education at the College Feminin de Bouffemont, near Paris. She made her debut in the Capital in 1936 and is a member of the American Newspaperwomen's Club.

Lieutenant Palmer, author of "Carter Glass, Unreconstructed Rebel," a biography of Senator Carter Glass of Virginia published in 1939, is now on active duty with the Coast Guard and has served on the high seas. He is a graduate of Roanoke College, Salem, Va.; Duke University, Durham, N. C., and the University of Virginia Law School in Charlottesville, Va. He is a member of Theta Chi social fraternity and is national vice president of Sigma Nu Phi legal fraternity, of which he was chancellor at the University of Virginia. He is also a member of Blue Key, Tau Kappa Alpha and Pi Gamma Mu honorary fraternities, and was a member of the South Atlantic Championship Debating team of 1934. He was admitted to the bar of Virginia in December, 1938, and practiced law as a partner in the firm of Palmer and Palmer.

The wedding will take place next month in All Souls Memorial Episcopal Church.

Clarkes Will Visit Soldier Sons in South

Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Clarke of Silver Spring, Md., left yesterday for New Orleans, La., where they will visit their son, Seaman Second Class Jack Clarke, USCG.

They will also attend the graduation ceremonies at Napier Field, Dothan, Ala., next Friday when another son, Lieut. Edward Clarke, will receive his wings and pilot's commission. The Clarkes will return to their home October 3.

Lady Huggins will be guest of honor at a luncheon to be given today by Mrs. Mortimer E. Sprague at the St. Regis. Others in the company will be Mrs. Charles Hill, Mrs. Wilfred Kurth, Mrs. Harold V. Smith, Mrs. Robert J. Newhouse, Mrs. Charles McManus and Mrs. George E. Allen.

Miss Bishop Weds Lieutenant Spann In West Point

The marriage of Miss Isabel F. Bishop, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene H. Bishop of Floral Park, Long Island, and Washington, D. C., and Lieut. Frederick Clayton Spann, son of Col. and Mrs. George F. Spann of South Orange, N. J., took place in the chapel at West Point, N. Y., on Thursday noon, September 16. The ceremony was performed by Chaplain J. B. Wathour, a cousin of the bridegroom's mother, and was followed by a wedding breakfast for immediate members of the families at the Thayer Hotel, West Point.

The bride was given in marriage by Colonel Spann. Mrs. Donald Raucher of New York City, sister of the bride, was matron of honor. Capt. William Halliday of West Point was best man.

The Midnight Bond Shows Take on New Dimensions

RUDY VALLEE

Appearing with him at both local houses the night of October 4 will be Jimmy Grier, bandmaster; the Flying Coast Guard Cutters, whatever they may be; Bob Maxwell, harpist; Dave Wade, the nature of whose talents are not revealed—perhaps I should know, but I don't seem to recall—Andy Secrest, formerly with Paul Whiteman, and his trumpet, and King Jackson, who, before his enlistment in the Coast Guard, was with Spike Jones and His City Slickers.

As I was saying, Lieutenant Vallee and his band and specialists would be a whole show in themselves. Add to all that the combined stage shows of the Earle and Capitol, plus the outstanding personalities from the legitimate theater and night clubs in town that week, and you really have something that is cheap at the price of bonds ranging in denominations from $25 to $100.

The appearance of Lieutenant Vallee and his company of musicians and artists was made possible through the instrumentality of Capt. Reed Hill, United States Coast Guard, in charge of the band and its current tour.

Bearing in mind that bond admitting to the midnight shows may be purchased only at motion picture theaters in the Greater Washington area that are authorized issuing agents, it is important to note that these "tickets" to one of the greatest shows ever assembled for a single evening in the history of the theater in the Capital must be bought before September 30. Although the dual performance will not be given until the night of October 4, the 15-billion-dollar Third War Loan drive officially ends the night of September 30. No bonds purchased after that date will be credited to the drive. To which there is only one answer. Unknot the old purst-strings and get going!

As was inevitable, the bond-show contagion has spread to the three major neighborhood theaters operated by the Kogod-Burka Amusement Co. On Monday, September 27, the Apex, Atlas and Senator theaters will give bond performances for which bond purchases can be made at any of the three on Saturday, Sunday or Monday. At the Apex and Senator, the screen attraction will be "DuBarry Was a Lady." The Atlas will present a double-feature screen bill and a stage show, headlined by six singing cowhands, billed as "The Colorado Cowboys."

Washington Boy on Broadway

Although "Land of Fame," a new play of the courageous fight of the Greeks against the Nazi and Fascist invaders, by Albert and Mary Bein, erstwhile Hollywood film writers, received something less than a unanimously complimentary press when it opened at the Belasco Theater, New York, on Tuesday night, it still should be of interest to Washington that one of the principal roles is played by Norman Rose.

Mr. Rose will be remembered as a former member of the Civic Theater acting group and as the "heavy" who unfailingly aroused the most vociferous boos, bahs and hisses in the old-time melodramas presented out at the Roadside Theater, now in hibernation for the duration. He is Peter Melinas in "Land of Fame," the underground warrior who fights doggedly to save his people.

Erwin Piscator, one of the better-known continental directors, will stage "A High Wind in Jamaica," the Paul Osborn dramatization of the Richard Hughes novel, scheduled as the Theater Guild's second production of the new season. The play, which will follow the Guild's presentation of Margaret Webster's "Othello," starring Paul Robeson and now in Boston, is ticketed to go into rehearsal early next month.

ᔓᔕ

If you have been wondering what has become of Fredric March since his withdrawal from the cast of Thornton Wilder's Pulitzer Prize-winner, "The Skin of Our Teeth"—coming again to the National before long with Conrad Nagel and Gladys George in the March and Tallulah Bankhead roles—he is in the Middle East on a tour of American servicemen's camps, under the auspices of USO-Camp Shows. In his troupe are Sammy Walsh, comedian; Jean Darrell, actress and singer, and Evelyn Hamilton, musician.

Why Stage Stars Have Nervous Breakdowns

When she joined Ed Wynn and "Big Time" at the National last Monday night, Marie Nash, the blonde songstress, did nothing to disturb the tradition that anything can happen—and usually does—on opening night. She had cut short an engagement at the Drake Hotel's Camellia House the preceding Thursday, arrived in New York on Friday and spent the day rehearsing. A quick dash to Hartford on Saturday to catch a matinee performance of "Big Time" and back to New York that night to hear Sigmund Romberg, with whom she toured most of last season. Down to Washington Sunday and rehearsing most of Monday. So far, so good.

Somehow, in New York, Miss Nash managed to pick up a new black gown to accentuate her blonde beauty at Monday night's opening. Came time to put it on and the zipper wouldn't zip. So, in desperation, she gave it everything she had. It came up, alright, and with it most of the material in its immediate vicinity, leaving something that looked as if it might have been created by, or for, Gypsy Rose Lee. Had not Mrs. Con Colleano, wife of the tight-wire artist in the show, salvaged a "spare" from Miss Nash's hotel trunk, those delightful songs might not have been heard by the first-nighters. And that would have been too bad.

HEDDA HOPPER

Maude Adams Will Not Give Up

Hollywood, Calif., Sept. 22.—Report that Maude Adams is leaving Stephens College to be replaced by a Hollywood star as dramatic director is untrue. Miss Adams has reached the age of retirement as a faculty member, but she'll produce several shows yearly and direct voice training and do research work. Hollywood's still trying to get her on the screen, but the answer is always no. . . . Bob Hope tees off on the air at the Pasadena Civic auditorium with Bing Crosby and the Desert Battalion as guests. . . . That fine actress, Edna Best, has turned radio producer for an advertising concern. . . . No surprise to me that Paul Lukas stole acting honors in "Watch on the Rhine," even from Bettie Davis. He always was a star, even tho in "Escape" Norma Shearer had another actor replace him—after which he went to Broadway and was hailed as the find of the season.

BOB HOPE

Hold On There!

They're rewriting scenes for Rosalind Russell's "Ten Per Cent Woman" to keep Willard Parker, new leading man, from running away with the picture. When the story was written, they had no idea the part was so powerful. But when Parker [of "Lady in the Dark"] got rolling, he was so good he dwarfed the others . . . Niven Busch, Teresa Wright's hubby, has signed to do the screen play of "Jubal Troop" for Sam Wood . . . The author's name on the screen script of "Since You Went Away" reads "Jeffrey Daniel." It's the nom de plume of David Selznick, who finally did the story himself. He took the names of his sons.

And What of Daisy?

If it's true Arthur Lake and Penny Singleton have broken their contract with Harry Cohn, that means the end of the Blondie pictures, but the air show goes blithely on . . . Back East I tried to place an order for a helicopter, when told even a fool could manage one. But it's no dice till the war's over . . . That Walt Disney and Alexander de Seversky were honored by Great Britain because of "Victory Through Airpower" seems a reflection on our country that they get more credit there than they do here. Perhaps we don't want to be educated—just entertained. When we go in for educational films, let's take a look at some of the French ones turned out just before the war, especially "The Harvest" . . . Gene Buck, who for 27 years has fought for musicians, got out of a sick bed to come out here for the annual ASCAP huddle, and believe me, for once in his life, he pulled no punches.

Film Expert Finds Market for Books

Hollywood.—Since reporting for work at Warner Bros. three months ago to aid in preparation of the Devil's Island sequence of the Humphrey Bogart film, "Passage to Marseille," Rene Belbenoit has sold 900 copies of the book, "Dry Guillotine." Now in its 121st printing, the book relates his escape from Devil's Island, and has been going at the rate of 45 daily on set.

Brent Changes Base

Hollywood, Sept. 22.—The first male star signed on an exclusive basis by William Goetz's International Productions is George Brent. At long last, after many rumors, George has left Warner's the studio that brought him to fame. For the last three or four years they haven't been exactly sympatica and he has wanted to be free. Bill has bought "Tomorrow Is Forever," by Gwen Bristow, for George's first starring vehicle.

Chatter in Hollywood: The inimitable Mike Romanoff joined the Darryl Zanucks and the Lew Schreibers the other eve when we were all having dinner. Mike was in rare form and started telling the story of his life and how Virginia and Darryl had befriended him when he was hungry. He said he had almost finished his book, the story of his fabulous life. "Did you tell all?" Darryl asked Mike, "and confess everything?" "I certainly did," he said, "and I also told that you were the one who started me on the straight and narrow path."

The golden chance that Dana Andrews has been begging for comes to him in "The Purple Heart," Darryl Zanuck's personally supervised movie. Darryl has named Andrews for the lead, and that means "Army Wife," which he was to have done, has been postponed. Up to now, there has been an almost ironic note about Dana's career.

Two companies share his contract, but poor Dana had begun to feel that nobody loved him. Twentieth Century didn't seem to want to build him up for Sam Goldwyn and Sam didn't want to build him up for Twentieth.

Ed Dougherty has just sold another story, and this one has a whale of a title, "Rock-A-Bye Brady." It's all about a prize fighter and a 10-year-old kid he adopts. He sold the story to Harry Sherman who seems to me to be one of the most up-and-coming producers in Hollywood. His "Hopalong Cassidys" are money in the bank and most of the pictures he makes are what the public wants to see. Ed Dougherty used to be on the New York Mirror in the days when I was a gal reporter on the New York American.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Henry Rogers, well-known press agent, is celebrating the brith of a baby boy. This is the Rogers' second child . . . Frank Sinatra left for New York with a bad cold . . . He spent Sunday at the beach trying to bake it out; now it's Olivia De Havilland who is getting Helmut Dantine's smiles; Patsy Ruth Miller's play is to be presented at the Left Bank Theater in Hollywood.

New York, Sept. 22.

Giles Romilly, the London newspaperman and nephew of Winston Churchill, was captured by the Germans at Narvik. Romilly, a careful, deliberate planner, one day quietly suggested to the others in his prison camp that they all put on their own show. And he boldly added that he not only would direct it but also play one of the roles. He assured his skeptical colleagues that he was an expert in amateur theatricals, and they agreed to do the show. The Nazi officials consented, and Romilly started his job—his first attempt at show business . . . The role he selected for himself to play was that of an old woman. He played the part well. And during the show, while still in his old woman's costume, was able to slip past the guards, and went 15 miles before he was recaptured.

Two more defendants in the famed Scottsboro case will be freed shortly by the State of Alabama. They've been in jail since February, 1931 . . . Brigadier General Osborne, head of Special Service, will have a new job . . . Undersecretary of the Interior Abe Fortas, who is entering the Army as a private, promised Harold Ickes that he wouldn't resign until after the Army doctors examine and accept him. In the meantime, Mrs. Fortas, who is a lawyer, is moving to New York to practice law here . . . Ed Foley, who was general counsel to the U. S. Treasury, has been made a full colonel. He'll head the finance setup in Italy.

Harry Hopkins' boy, Sergt. Robert Hopkins, is in Salerno . . . Moss Hart, who at last has completed his Air Force play, is a patient at Doctors Hospital now . . . The "Russian Winter" song, which was one of ""his Is the Army," won't be heard by the Londoners who soon will see the show. Irving Berlin has written a substitute "Kick in the Pants" . . . John Hammond, the swing expert, will enter the Army on October 2 . . . When Mrs. Comacho, wife of the President of Mexico, purchases any rationed wares in the U. S., she needs no coupons. Harry Hopkins' article about the end of the war in the American magazine had much of it censored by his boss.

Epic of Russian Valor at Little

By Marjorie Kelly

Of chief interest on the Little Theater's current bill, though less than an hour long, is the Russian documentary "Black Sea Fighters," which opened yesterday morning along with a revival of "My Favorite Blonde."

The film concerns itself mainly with the defense of Sevastopol, recording all phases of the bloody 250-day siege which cost Hitler 350,000 men and gained him nothing but a pile of wreckage in which 11 houses were standing, in the whole of the famous old city.

It is a gripping record, of almost shocking realism. Many Red army cameramen lost their lives making this film, and the reason why is obvious. It's a front-line job—the camera takes you into the thick of the fighting. The Black Sea fleet is shown in action; there is a commando raid to end all Hollywood commando raids; savage bayonet charges of the black-clad naval infantrymen.

Fight With Frenzy

Perhaps the sharpest impression one gets from the film is of the intense hatred with which the Russians fight. It is a powerful answer to the Russia-will-make-a-separate-peace-with Germany boys. The likelihood of a nation which fights with such complete destations of the enemy reversing itself to the extent of granting a separate and early peace seems pretty remote.

The accompanying English commentary, which was beautifully written by Clifford Odets and narrated by Fredric March, tells of these soldiers buckling grenades to their belts and throwing themselves under the treads of tanks. The battles which you see bear witness to this determined, hate-inspired fighting, almost as fanatical as that of the Japanese.

Of "My Favorite Blonde" little need be said at this point, beyond the fact that it is one of the merrier of the espionage comedies, in which Bob Hope and Madeleine Carroll, in the title role, have abundant outlets for their talents. The production is on a large scale and the supporting cast excellent.

Height No Worry To Miss Bergman

Hollywood.—Ever since Ingrid Bergman, the beautiful Swedish star who portrays Maria in "For Whom the Bell Tolls," arrived in Hollywood, studio executives have viewed her height with alarm. She stands 5 feet 7½ inches tall, and that, every film executive believed, was just too much of a good thing, even for a woman as beautiful as Ingrid.

"When I first arrived from Sweden," she said, "they looked at me and they said, 'Put her on a diet.' I suppose they thought a diet would shrink me!"

But Ingrid never did go on a diet and her height never did bother her—or anybody else, either.

Ex-Rodeo Rider

Bill Edwards, tall newcomer who has a top role in Paramount's "Hail the Conquering Hero," was formerly a broncho rider in rodeos and wild west shows. He doesn't even get near a horse in the picture.

7 Drug Firms Combined Into Wyeth, Inc.

Wyeth, Inc., has been formed as one of the largest ethical drug houses in the Nation through the grouping of seven companies in the pharmaceutical, biological and nutritional fields, the American Home Products Corp. said yesterday.

It will be a wholly owned subsidiary of American Home Products and will be world-wide in operation through plants in England, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa and Argentina.

The new organization derived its name from the 83-year-old pharmaceutical manufacturing company —John Wyeth & Bros., Inc., Philadelphia.

Others in the group are S. M. A. Corp. of Chicago and Mason, Mich.; Petrogalar Laboratories, Inc., and the Bovinine Co., both Chicago; Reichel Laboratories, Inc., Kimberton and West Chester, Pa.; Gilliland Laboratories, Inc., Marietta, Pa., and General Biochemicals, Inc., Chagrin Falls, Ohio. All have been operating as American Home Products subsidiaries.

Harry S. Howard, who will resign as American Home president to head the new house, outlined some aims of Wyeth, Inc.

The company is "seeking to perfect a process for the dehydration of all biological products such as is now being done to pencillin and blood plasma," he said. "Once this is achieved the potency of serums, vaccines and antitoxins may be measured in terms of years instead of in months as at present."

Howard said the combination therefore "is not only significant from the business standpoint." He said all the units will cooperate in research in the three fields, pharmaceutical, nutritional and biological.

Payload Gains Sharply

American Airlines yesterday reported that in August 2,043,958 pounds of express were carried, an increase of 67.3 per cent over August, 1942. Air mail carried was 2,484,601 pounds during the month, an increase of 92.1 per cent.

The average payload per airplane mile for August of this year was 4688 pounds compared to an average load of 4275 pounds in August 1942.

Bank Dividend Voted

A quarterly dividend of 2 per cent, payable October 11, to stockholders of the American Security & Trust Co. of record September 30, was declared at the monthly meeting of directors.

Lorillard Bond, Stock Offering Expected Soon

New York, Sept. 22 (AP).—A syndicate headed by Lehman Bros. and Smith, Barney & Co. has been formed to handle the public offering of 20 million dollars of debentures and 374,391 shares of common stock of P. Lorillard Co. Proceeds will be used to retire 19 million dollars of bank loans and to pay at maturity or before $5,209,600 of 7 per cent bonds maturing October 1, 1944.

The offering was registered Tuesday with the Securities & Exchange Commission. Prices at which the debentures and stock will be offered will be determined later.

Poultry Prices Fall in Chicago

Chicago, Sept. 22 (AP).—Impact of the largest poultry crop in history was felt in Chicago today as chickens in great numbers started invading the markets here. Prices fell as much as 5 cents a pound under OPA ceilings.

This year's poultry production is exceeding by 21 per cent the records set in 1942, reports by hatcheries to the Federal Bureau of Agricultural Economics said. The August rate was 50 per cent higher than for August, 1942.

The first eight months this year saw the number of chicks produced totaling 1,332,382,000, compared with 1,099,755,000 for the same period last year. August figures this year of 29,112,000 compared with 22,427,000 last August.

In addition, turkeys, which are not included in the poultry figures, were expected to total 500 million pounds.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Sept. 22 (AP).—Closing out of September contracts today created divergent price trends in grains. In oats the September contract was strong, hitting a new high since 1920, but the same delivery in wheat lost more than a cent and was little changed in rye.

Deferred contracts of wheat were down only small fractions, as was also the case with rye. July rye made a slight advance. There was considerable switching into deferred oats contracts and gains ranging to about a cent were recorded.

At the close wheat was ¾-1⅛ lower, September 1.47⅛@1.47⅜, December 1.48@1.48⅛; oats were unchanged to 1⅛ higher, September 79⅜@79½, and rye was ⅜ lower to ¼ higher, September 1.05⅛@1.05¼.

Put yourself in his shoes tonight
Think how eager you'd be to talk to the folks at home, if you were in the Army and away at camp.
That's something to remember when you're thinking about making a Long Distance call between 7 and 10 o'clock at night.
You see, that's about the only time a soldier can get to the telephone. If the circuits are crowded, he may not be able to reach home before taps.

PUBLIC AUCTION SALE OF FOLLOWING VALUABLE IMPROVED AND UNIMPROVED REAL ESTATE, TO BE CRIED IN FRONT OF PREMISES: 631 AND 633 F STREET, N.W. (ONE-HALF INTEREST); 33,000 SQUARE FEET OF GROUND AT THE SOUTHEAST CORNER OF SIXTEENTH STREET AND FORT DRIVE, N.W.; 712 K STREET, N.W.; AND 2624-26-28 CONN. AVE., N.W.

By the authority of the undersigned owners, each acting only with respect to the individual interest of himself or herself, the following described property in the District of Columbia will be offered for sale at public auction, at the times stated:

AT 2:30 O'CLOCK P. M. ON MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 27, 1943: One-half (½) interest in Lots 43 and 44, in Square 456, improved by premises Nos. 631 and 633 F Street, N.W., and said to contain 3,464 and 2,788 square feet, respectively;

AT 3:30 O'CLOCK P. M. ON MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 27, 1943: Lot B, Square 427, improved by premises numbered 712 K Street, N.W., and said to contain 2,700 square feet;

AT 2:30 O'CLOCK P. M. ON TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 28, 1943: Parcels 87/411 and 87/401, being unimproved ground situated at the southeast corner of 16th Street and Fort Drive, N.W., and said to contain 27,536 and 4,878 square feet, respectively;

AT 2:30 O'CLOCK P. M. ON TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 28, 1943: Lot 117 in Square 2303, improved by premises numbered 2624, 2626 and 2628 Connecticut Avenue, N.W., and said to contain 2,373 square feet.

TERMS OF SALE: ALL CASH. A cash deposit at sale of $1,000 required of purchaser on each of the first three parcels and of $2,500 on the last parcel. Sale subject to covenants and restrictions of record and tenancies which will be announced at the sale. Rent, taxes, water rent and other charges to be adjusted to date of settlement. Examination of title, conveyancing, recording, revenue stamps and notarial fees at cost of purchaser. A good title will be conveyed to the purchaser, or no sale. Terms to be complied with within thirty (30) days from day of sale, otherwise the undersigned reserve the right to resell property at risk and cost of defaulting purchaser, after fifteen (15) days' advertisement of such resale in some newspaper published in Washington, D. C., or deposit may be forfeited, or without forfeiting deposit, the undersigned may avail themselves of any legal or equitable rights against defaulting purchaser.

NAPOLEON AND UNCLE ELBY — By Clifford McBride

The Washington Merry-Go

—By Drew Pe

SECRETARY of War Stimson is a man of great composure, but he was visibly perturbed when a delegation from the Senate and House Military Affairs Committees called to protest the transfer of Gen. George Marshall from the position of Chief of Staff to become Allied Commander in Chief when the Second Front starts across the Channel.

Secretary Stimson at first looked shocked that anyone knew about Marshall's impending transfer, but did not deny that it was in the works. He did deny, however, that it was being made at the behest of the British.

"A man should serve where he can render the greatest service to his country," Stimson told his callers.

His congressional callers, however, contended that to remove Marshal from the position of chief of staff, where he helped decide strategy for all war fronts, would be a blow to the war. They argued that he was the best qualified and most experienced man in the Army to decide strategy for all fronts, and that placing him in England would give him only one field of military operation.

They argued that Marshall not be moved at all, or if he must be moved, that he become General of the Armies, which would put him in charge of all American war policy.

Stimson listened carefully, said little. In the end, however, he observed that the matter was "still in the making" and asked his callers not to accept Marshall's transfer "as the completed thing."

OCD to Continue

RUMORS about OCD folding up now can be embalmed. Ever since the news leak on Jim Landis' appointment as State Department coordinator in Cairo it was reported that the Office of Civilian Defense would be taken apart and the pieces given to the War Department and Charley Taft for his Community War Services program.

Inside fact is that an executive order was drafted for this purpose but was blocked largely through the efforts of quiet but effective Harold Smith of the Budget Bureau. He believed that although air raid duty would be lessened, there was a big job to be done by milions of volunteers both in war service work and protective activity against accidents and fires.

So OCD's army of 11 million volunteers now seems to be assured of continued organization and leadership for the duration. John Martin, a former Rhodes scholar, now serving as Acting Director of OCD, is young, 34, but tough-mided and hard-working. He thinks that OCD must be frank with the American people; that there is no longer much danger of serious bombing, but there are other jobs to do. He has come up through the mill in OCD since the days of Mayris Chaney, Mrs. Roosevelt's dancing girl, at which time he and Jim Landis began to clean house.

Tires Go to Waste

A SCRAP dealer named Morris Kaplan came bustling into the War Production Board the other day. He said:

"Look here, I've got an inventory of 450 tires in my place in Cambridge, Mass., today, and they're gathering dust and getting in the way. I had more than that, but I took 200 tires and scrapped them just because I got tired of stumbling over them.

"Those tires," said Kaplan, "are good second-hand tires, and they ought to be put on somebody's car, not thrown out for scrap. But the red tape of rationing is too much for us, so they go for scrap."

Kaplan's tale fell on sympathetic ears in the WPB, where officials would like to move odd-size tires from second-hand dealers all over the country. But they are thwarted by the red tape of rationing. To get a tire of any kind—old, new, regular size or odd size—you must have a certificate from the ration board.

When a buyer starts that difficult routine, however, he decides that his troubles might as well be invested in the best kind of tire he can get, so he buys a new tire. Result is that the second-hand tires go unused, and are cluttering up junk yards all over the country.

WPB experts name New England as the worst area in this respect, other tough spots being

Supersleuth's Advice

FBI's SUPERSLEUTH, J. Edgar Hoover, has a lecture which he delivers to his bureau chiefs ever so often.

"Remember," he says, "that you're not bureaucrats. You're servants of the people. And now and then it's a good thing to get out of Washington and brush up on what the people are thinking and talking about.

"Desk-sitting in Washington," Hoover, "is all right for a while. But after too long a time it makes a man think he's a little tin god. That's the first sign of that disease called 'bureaucracy,' and if you don't cure it right away it gets virulent. So nip it in the bud by getting out with the real people of the Nation."

Hoover himself practices what he preaches. Three or four times a year, he gets away from Washington for a swing around his chief FBI offices. He has just returned from an inspection trip which took him through Detroit to the West Coast and back.

"Sitting out under the Sierra Mountains," says Hoover, "you look around and realize that despite the headaches of bureaucracy and the turmoil of war, this world has gone on a lot longer than any of us and will be here for a long time afterward."

Merry-Go-Round

Dr. T. V. Soong, China's Foreign Minister, received the press for a conference at the embassy in Washington. As he was speaking, a photographer tried a close-up. "Will you wait till I finish?" said Soong. "You caught me with my mouth open. I might be a flycatcher!" . . . A Southern belle who works in Office of Civilian Defense, declined an invitation to a buffet supper given by Deputy Director Maj. Gen. Ulysses S. Grant 3d. "With recollections of the Civil War," she declared stoutly, "I wouldn't be seen at a party with anybody named General Grant."
